Sensational Testimony Offered in Hyde Park Heiress' Suit for Divorce

Charging that her husband inflicted physical and mental torture upon her, censored her letters, tried to make her his slave, and accused her of being a spy, Mrs. Margaret Reed Freeman of Hyde Park today began her battle in Suffolk Superior Court for divorce from Ernest B. Freeman, general manager of the Sturtevant Blower Works.

A fashionably dressed crowd of men and women heard the sensational charges as presented by the attorney for the wife. Freeman is a $20,000 a year man, and his wife the heiress of one of the richest men of Worcester.

"INSANELY JEALOUS."

Among the prominent people present was former Governor Eugene Noble Foss, head of the Sturtevant Company, and close business and personal associate of the husband. Judge Fosdick presided.

Mrs. Freeman, in subdued attire, listened to the opening arraignment of her husband without the slightest expression, and when called to the stand gave her testimony in a calm and impersonal manner.

Attorney Damon E. Hall of the firm of Hurlburt, Jones & Hall made the opening statement for the wife, who sues for divorce on the grounds of cruel and abusive treatment.

He based his arraignment of the accused husband on the following allegations:

1—That Freeman was insanely jealous, without reason, and for

TRAIN SERVICE CRIPPLED: BIG ENGINES FIGHT WAY THROUGH SNOW

The steam trawler Foam, which arrived in port today, was coated with ice—as the photograph shows. And despite their experience the crew wasn't complaining—out loud—because the weather wasn't balmy. Other ships that were out in the storm carried similar loads of ice and snow.

TO INVESTIGATE HIGH CHARGES BY CONSTABLES

Complaints of illegal charges by constables in the collection of poll taxes will be investigated by Collector Deland, and if found to be true he will ask that the constables' license be revoked. Mr. Deland will call the constables before him tomorrow and examine them separately.

"If any of the fifteen constables now serving warrants for the city is asking more than he should—out he goes," said Mr. Deland.

The collector's action is the result of a complaint by City Councilor Watson that Constable Roscoe A. Smith attempted to collect $8.61 from Daniel H. Driscoll of No. 5 Julian street, Dorchester, for a 1918 poll tax. It is said the constable finally accepted $6.

"Lucky you were at home," Smith is said to have told Driscoll. "If you were working at Framingham I would have had to hire an automobile and go after you, and charged you the cost of the car and the services of an assistant."

Railroad service on the three lines entering Boston was demoralized today by reason of the continued cold, high winds and drifting snows. Trains reached the city from ten minutes to two hours later.

Relief from the cold is promised by Forecaster Smith, but there will be another fall of snow, and increasing winds, which have caused much of the trouble. Tonight will be slightly warmer.

Five fishing vessels made this port today, ice coated, with their crews suffering from frost bites, after buckling hurricanes all the way from the Banks.

The steam trawler Teal, Captain Jack Hayes, tied up at T Wharf, a day late, having started home last Saturday. Captain Hayes reported that the gale at times attained a velocity of 100 miles and throughout the journey was blowing more than sixty miles an hour. The little vessel which normally makes 12 knots, was only able to accomplish three knots, and forced draught was necessary for this.

The trawlers Foam, Spray and Crest, and the schooner Fannie Belle Atwood, which docked at the South Boston Fish Pier, reported similar experiences.

Seven steamships and three tugs arrived here today, all bearing marks of the storm. The Lake Cenese, Captain Atkinson, arrived from Norfolk with coal, her deck buried beneath a foot of ice. Her cargo set her so low that she was continually deluged with spray. The crew, with axes and steam from the boiler, worked several hours to clear the deck of ice before they could begin unloading.

The other craft arriving were in similar plight. Captain Atkinson reported a terrific gale, blowing at

BLAZE IN HOME OF PRESIDENT MURLIN

The apartment of President Lemuel H. Murlin of Boston University at No. 88 Fenway, Back Bay, was damaged to the extent of $1,000 by fire today.

The damage, chiefly due to chemicals used in combatting the blaze, was confined to two rooms. A defective fireplace was the cause of the blaze.

President and Mrs. Murlin and several other tenants of the building were compelled to go into the hallways, but they did not leave the building. President Murlin's apartment is on the top floor of a five-story brick structure. Peter Wenack is owner of the building.

De Valera in '26 Points' Says Irish Question Is Boon to World

New York, Jan. 19.—President De Valera of the Irish Republic has issued a series of "points." Instead of the Wilsonian fourteen, they number twenty-six. Here are some of them:

By EAMON DE VALERA.

1—If the Irish question did not exist, it would be well for the world at this time to invent it.

2—It is fortunate that the question of Ireland's recognition arises. It is doubly fortunate that America is strong enough to decide this question boldly, without fear, in the way its conscience prompts.

3—Ireland's cause is not Ireland's cause only—the cause of the world. It is the cause of right and justice, and of true democracy everywhere.

4—If I were an American, I would

Senate Naval Affairs Committee Orders Inquiry Into Admiral's Charges

By International News Service.

Washington, Jan. 19.—A full investigation of the charges made by Rear Admiral Sims regarding the American naval policy during the war was ordered today by the Senate Naval Affairs Committee.

The committee authorized the medal awards investigation committee to inquire fully into the facts placed before that committee by Admiral Sims on Saturday, that he was sent to France with orders "not to let the British pull the wool over your eyes."

The conduct of the war by the Navy Department also will be gone into.

Senator Pittman, Democrat, of Nevada, offered a resolution to have the full navy committee take up the case. This was defeated. A second motion by Pittman to have a separate sub-committee inquire into the question was defeated.

DANIELS WELCOMES PROBE.

Senator Walsh, Democrat, of Montana offered a resolution to have the medal awards committee inquire into the charges. This was passed without a record vote.

The committee will begin the probe following the completion of the medal awards investigation.

Secretary Daniels said today that he would be glad to have the Senate make a complete investigation of the navy.

"Every letter and every order and everything the navy did is ripe for their inspection," he said.

"The navy did a great deal and we are proud of it," he added.

"Of course we don't pretend to say that the navy did 100 per cent of all that might have been done.

"The navy's primary duty was the protection of the soldiers who were being transported to France, and that was done.

CAUTIONED ADMIRAL SIMS.

"The second great duty of the navy was the warfare against submarines and our record stands open on that matter.

"Admiral Sims was sent to London to investigate and to make recommendation. He was there to obey orders.

"I cautioned Admiral Sims before going to London and recalled a speech he had made there some years ago which was hardly diplomatic.

"The only reason I have answered his charge and declared that I did not think the statement he referred to with regard to the British pulling the wool over his eyes was because that subject might be internationally discussed.

"A thorough investigation should be made of all these charges. If the Senate doesn't make it, some other tribunal may be asked to."

Tufts Student's Toes Frozen When He Was Hazed

With several toes frozen as the result of a "hazing stunt" at Tufts College, Harold E. Rounds, son of Henry C. Rounds of the Malden Fire Department, is in the Somerville Hospital today.

Young Rounds, who is a freshman, was forced to run through the snow in his bitter cold, in his stocking feet. While in France as a member of Company L, 101st Infantry, he had several toes frozen.

Hospital authorities said today that he would probably be obliged to remain there a week or ten days.

'SOVIET' ENVOY DEFENDS ACTS IN AMERICA

Washington, Jan. 19.—Ludwig A. C. K. Martens, the "Soviet Ambassador," appeared today before the Senate committee investigating the activities of Bolshevism in America. Martens is to be arrested by the Department of Justice.

Martens said at the age of twenty-five years he was deported from Russia to Germany in 1896. He said he practiced his profession of scientist in Germany until 1905, when he went to Switzerland, where he became identified with the "people interested in the revolutionary movement in Russia."

His arrest and deportation from Russia, he said, "took place in connection with agitation at the time of the coronation of Alexander II." He served two years in the German army during his stay in Germany, being forced to undergo military service. He returned from Switzerland and to Germany in 1906 and thence to England, where he remained ten years.

More than a year after the war began he came to this country, the English government furnishing him with passports and offering no objection to his departure for America. Upon his arrival as New York he declared his German citizenship, but was permitted to land when he showed he was here to represent Russian interests and his mission in this country was to buy machinery for Russia, Martens testified.

A year after his arrival in this country he was "objected to" by the "Soviet Bund" of a socialist paper published in this country, Martens said, and he was expelled from his "editorial duties" when the United States entered the war.

He did not register as an enemy alien then, as he had taken out papers of Russian citizenship. "I am a Russian citizen," Martens said.

Following the completion of his statement, the committee adjourned until Wednesday so it might have opportunity to employ counsel.

By International News Service.

Washington, Jan. 19.—Chief Justice White today announced that the United States Supreme Court has granted the State of Rhode Island permission to test the constitutionality of the prohibition amendment.

The State of Rhode Island filed a petition before the Supreme Court to enjoin Attorney-General Palmer and the Federal officers from enforcement of the prohibition amendment and the Volstead Act. The claim was set up that this amendment violated the reserved police powers of the State of Rhode Island, and was in conflict with the terms of ratification by the State of the Constitution of the United States.

Solicitor-General King opposed review by the Supreme Court of the constitutionality of the "prohibition amendment, on the ground that the question involved is a political one, and not judicial. The Supreme Court overrules this contention.

$80,000 LOSS IN B. & M. FREIGHT OFFICE FIRE

Two Firemen Injured as the Flames Sweep Railroad's Y. M. C. A. Building

Two firemen were painfully injured, scores of others prostrated and damage estimated at $80,000 resulted when fire destroyed the greater portion of the general freight offices of the Boston & Maine Railroad and the road's Y. M. C. A. building.

The fire, which threatened the loss of property valued at more than $1,000,000, was discovered in the bedrooms occupied by John Fisher, a railroad conductor, in the Y. M. C. A. dormitory, by Arthur Gamble, a janitor. He roused the sixteen other occupants of the building, and they scarcely had time to flee with a few articles of clothing before one side of the structure was a mass of flames.

Fanned by a stiff northeast wind the flames spread with lightning-like rapidity. Hundreds of barrels of oil, several feet from the blazing building, and two huge sheds containing highly inflammable articles, but forty yards away, occupied the attention of the firemen from the time of their arrival and after a hard fight the oil and the sheds were saved.

It required nearly five hours to get the flames under control and during that time three alarms had been sent.

The injured firemen are Thomas J. Kinney of Engine 28, Mason street, fracture of several ribs on the right side sustained when a cornice from a cupola of the freight office knocked him twenty odd feet from a ladder, and Richard F. Aylward of Chemical 4, Bulfinch place, bruises of the right hand and arm received from falling timbers.

Charles F. Greeley of Ladder 8, Fort Hill square, was so severely prostrated that he was treated at the Massachusetts Relief station.

WILSON GREETS PAN-AMERICAN CONFERENCE

Declares Republics Will Serve World to Utmost of Their Capacity

By International News Service.

Washington, Jan. 19.—The American republics will "serve the world to the utmost of their capacity," declared President Wilson today in a message of greeting to the second Pan-American financial conference in session here.

The American nations will fulfill their "obligations" to the world, the President declared.

"It is no small achievement that the Americas are able today to say to the world, 'Here is an important section of the globe, which has today eliminated the idea of conquest from its national thoughts and from its international policy,'" President Wilson declared.

President Wilson's message read at the opening session in the Pan-American Union this morning follows:

"Gentlemen of the Americas:

"I regret more deeply than I can well express that the condition of my health deprives me of the pleasure and privilege of meeting with you and personally expressing the gratification which every officer of this government has because of your presence at the national capital, and particularly because of the friendly and significant mission which brings you to us.

"I rejoice with you that in these troubled times of world reconstruction the republics of the American continents should seek no selfish purpose, but should be guided by a desire to serve one another and to serve the world to the utmost of their capacity.

"The great privileges that have been showered upon us both by reason of our geographical position and because of the high political and social ideals that have determined the national development of every country of the American continent carries with them obligations, the fulfillment of which must be regarded as a real privilege by every true American.

"It is no small achievement that the Americas are able today to say to the world, 'Here is an important section of the globe which today has eliminated the idea of conquest from its national thoughts and from its international policy.'

"The spirit of mutual helpfulness which animates this conference supplements and strengthens this important achievement of international policy. I rejoice with you that we are privileged to assemble with the sole purpose of ascertaining how we can serve one another, for in doing so, we best serve the world."

$50,000 STILL NEEDED AS Y. D. ISSUES FINAL APPEAL TO PEOPLE

CAMPAIGN CLOSES TONIGHT

Today is the last in the $200,000 offensive of the Yankee Division for a Y. D. Memorial Clubhouse in Boston.

Before midnight tonight Boston and New England must give $50,000 if they are to carry the Y.D. offensive through to victory.

According to the figures given out at the campaign headquarters, No. 85 Milk street, $150,000 had been obtained and each mail was bringing additional checks.

General Charles H. Cole, leader of the drive; Colonel Willard E. Luther, chairman of the finance committee, and F. Nathaniel Perkins, chairman of the civilian committee, were quite optimistic, but urged that Boston and New England strain their utmost. Only by doing so, they said, could the objective be attained.

$1,000 FROM THEATRES.

Meantime, however, it has been decided, because of the fact many, many persons may not have opportunity to give today and because certain committees have not finished their work, to keep the headquarters open permanently. Contributions will be received there at any time, also at the State Street Trust Company, or at any bank.

Y. D. men speaking in theatres collected more than $4,000. Everywhere the soldiers were received with enthusiasm. The theatre managers co-operated and so hearty was the response to the soldiers' appeal that collectors had to be pressed into service to collect the money offered for the cause.

Yidins issued the following statement:

"The Y. D. Club of Boston will be established as a memorial to those patriot boys who sacrificed their lives in behalf of freedom and lie buried in soldiers' graves in France. It will further serve as a rendezvous for comradeship, for those who by God's will, were enabled to return home.

CHANCE TO PAY DEBT.

"The citizens of Boston and New England are given an opportunity today, in part at least, a debt that can never be paid in full. The boys of the 26th Division volunteered and the first call. It is the citizens' opportunity to volunteer now. Do not hesitate. Act at once.

"Tonight the fund stands at $150,000. During the next twenty-four hours $50,000 more must come in. If you have not already subscribed or wish to increase your subscription every addition will be gratefully received.

"As delayed payments will continue coming in, the headquarters, No. 85 Milk street, will remain open. Checks may be sent to Allan Forbes, treasurer, State Street Trust Company, Boston, or to any bank."

North End Service Men Ask Clubhouse for All in War, Not Y. D. Alone

Editor Boston American:

As veterans of the World War, and members of the American Legion, we in session assembled, passed the following proposal regarding the Y. D. club case drive:

"Whereas, the members of the 26th Division have organized to solicit fund for a Y. D. home, and to be used for the benefit of the Y. D. boys, although it is understood that the Y. D. boys of Boston and vicinity compose only a small majority of the veterans of Boston and vicinity. They have forgotten that the marine and navy and other divisions of the army are also veterans of the World War.

"This drive for a clubhouse should be for the benefit of all veterans, and instead of bearing the name Y. D. clubhouse it should bear the name of World War Veterans' Memorial, or any other name not discriminating any body of men.

"Although we do not disregard the able work for democracy that the Twenty-sixth Division has performed for which they deserve credit, it must not be forgotten that there are many other members of the army, navy and marine corps in Boston and vicinity that have also given their utmost to the country for the noble cause in which we have all taken part.

"We therefore propose that the proceeds of this fund be used to construct a memorial to all members of the army, navy and marine corps, which will not bear any particular name of any organization. Such a drive would be a democratic one and would be enthusiastically supported by all who have taken part in the World War and which will be supported by the united effort of the civilian population.

"After an interview with different citizens and veterans, we find that they are in favor of this proposal.

POSTMASTER'S FAMILY IS MODEL OF AFFECTION

Postmaster Baker's daughter, Mrs. Robert Winsor, Jr. (Susan Revere Baker), and her husband, and his wife, Mrs. Roland M. Baker. Photo by the Kimball Studio, Concord, N. H.

While Roland M. Baker, new Boston postmaster, was so little known politically that his appointment by President Wilson came as almost a complete surprise, the man himself is widely known in the shoe and leather trade, and the Baker family is known in various New England towns and cities as a model of family affection.

There are three children in the Baker family, Robert Morris, Jr., Richard K. and Susan R. The latter named was Susan R. Baker until a short time ago, when she became Mrs. Robert Winsor, Jr., wife of the son of one of Boston's best-known financiers.

During Mr. Baker's career in the shoe and leather business the family has lived in Brooklyn, Newburyport, Portsmouth, N. H., and other New England cities.

The postmaster was born in Dedham, April 20, 1865, son of Joseph E. and Sarah W. (Bayley) Baker. In 1891 he married Ruth M. Morris of Concord, N. H. The family now lives at No. 70 Chestnut street, Boston.

Russia Welcomes Deported Radicals, Declares Karl Radek

By International News Service.

Berlin, Jan. 19.—"Russia welcomes the return of bolshevik sympathizers deported from the United States, for Russia requires either German or American help for reconstruction," declared Karl Radek, former chief of the propaganda section of the Soviet government and formerly Lenine's main lieutenant in Germany, today.

Radek has been deported from Germany, having been sent out of the country by way of Poland, but he gave a long interview setting forth his impressions before he left.

"RUSSIA NEEDS MARTENS."

A report had been received from the United States that Ludwig Martens, the so-called "Soviet ambassador," was about to be deported, and Radek immediately began to discuss this subject.

"So they may deport Martens and keep George Bakhmeteff, the minister of a non-existent Russian government," he commented.

"Bakhmeteff is living upon money from unfilled Russian war contracts. We would be glad if Martens returned.

"He is an engineer of the highest technical ability and such are needed for the rebuilding of Russia. We can use all that the United States has disposed. Their education and experience in America will be valuable to our government. But you Americans should have put your Statue of Liberty on board the deportation ship, sending it to Moscow along with the Bolsheviks."

CALLS U. S. AUTOCRATIC.

Radek then went into a long political dissertation, declaring that the United States is not free, but is autocratic, whereas Russia is the freest land of freedom. He continued:

"Deportations make the best propaganda in the world for us. It calls attention to our cause. The Socialist Communist party, which now numbers 75,000."

Radek was asked if Martens had any relations with the Industrial Workers of the World in America. He answered, "None whatsoever. The I. W. W. members want a revolution the next morning, but we are against sabotage by workers. The workers should not destroy today what they will need tomorrow.

"Russia requires either American or German help. Martens has been helping American shoe workers."

"LLOYD GEORGE WANTS PEACE."

"Will England make peace with Russia?" Radek was asked. He replied:

"So long as Ireland, Egypt and Germany remain in an unsettled condition England will play Denikin against the Soviets. The danger of Bolshevism to the British empire exists, but the cry of Bolshevism by the British officials is a manoeuvre. The danger does not lie in the armies we may send, but in the leaders.

Radek continued:

"Premier Lloyd George sincerely wants peace with Russia as soon as Franklin is ousted. I believe that Lloyd George will go into the British Parliament and say: 'Either fight Russia or make peace; the war party cannot be aroused, so it must therefore be peace.'

Radek was asked if Russia would attack Poland in the Spring.

"I do not make comments anywhere, but it is possible that M. Clemenceau may drive the Poles into attacking Russia and then Poland, a country without a middle class, will become Bolshevist," he said.

(At the time this interview was secured M. Clemenceau was still premier of France and a striking figure in the international councils.)

FRANKLIN SQUARE DRIVE GETS NEW AID

The girls who worked as volunteers during the war for the different doughboy drives, have formed a "Yankee Division auxiliary" to help put the Franklin Square House $100,000 drive over the top.

Girls in the new group include the Misses Agnes Hudson, Mrs. E. M. Eberson, Betty Stahr, Helen J. O'Day, Julia G. McKinney, Eva Andre, Olive G. Peters, Elsie Bryant, Mrs. Hugh French, Camille C. Nixon, Nellie E. Hamilton and L. Irene Shaw.

Each of the girls is working hard to win one of the four prizes offered to the four volunteers who succeed who secure the highest totals in subscriptions at the close of the clean-up campaign. Activities during the Franklin Square clean-up campaign will be intensified this week by the addition of more Jackson and Wellesley College workers, and also a large new group of the Blue Triangle squad at the Boston Young Women's Christian Association. Members of the Blue Triangle Circle are boosting for the drive.

The outlook for success in the clean-up campaign is excellent," Dr. George L. Perin, president of the Franklin Square House, said.

INFLUENZA MAY AGAIN ATTACK BOSTON

Danger of Recurrence if Cases in West Are Virulent, Woodward Says

Chicago, Jan. 19.—The spread of influenza, epidemic in Chicago, was unchecked today. The Health Department reported a total of 1,780 new cases in the last forty-eight hours, with sixteen deaths. An emergency force of 800 nurses has been increased fifty or them coming from Detroit. . .

Boston, as well as the entire country is in danger of a recurrence of the influenza epidemic if the disease which has already claimed hundreds in Chicago and the West is of a virulent type, Health Commissioner William C. Woodward declared today.

Dr. Woodward said that he knew of no way to prevent the recurrence, and that the germs, which caused its spread in Boston would have to be taken up by the United States health authorities.

"I should say that not only Boston, but the whole country is in danger of a recurrence of influenza if the influenza that has broken out in Chicago and elsewhere is of a virulent form," he said.

"Whether we actually will have it or not, no man's guess is as good as another's. Anything that is to be done to prevent the spread of the influenza, will have to be done by the government. So far as I know, we are no better able to prevent its spread than we were when the disease first struck the country. We are merely better informed in regard to our helplessness."

The number of influenza cases has risen in four months from an average of five weekly to twenty-seven weekly. The high mark was reached the week before last, but last week twenty-three cases were reported to the health board.

A close watch is being kept on the deaths from lobar and bronchial pneumonia, Dr. Woodward said. As these diseases frequently have their inception in influenza.

Only one death from influenza has been recorded in the past four weeks. This occurred in the week of January 10. The number of deaths from lobar pneumonia has also numbered sixteen and from bronchial pneumonia twelve. This is less than the average number, Dr. Woodward stated.

Shell-Torn Faces Made as Good as New by Harvard Surgeon

A man in Boston who has his jaw torn away or his face mangled in an accident need no longer hide himself from the public because his injuries are of frightful appearance.

He can go to a very special man—Dr. V. H. Kazanjian of the clinic of oral surgery at Harvard Dental School, where the dean of the school, Dr. Eggleston, has made plastic surgery as good as new.

Dr. Kazanjian, who is assisting in the First Harvard Unit, an echelon of oral dental surgery, restored thousands of soldiers whose faces were half shot away; whose jaws were shattered; whose chins were completely obliterated; whose cheeks were badly scarred; whose tongues were paralyzed, or whose noses were almost hopelessly lacerated.

At present Dr. Kazanjian is fitting three varying surgeries to meet a variety of defects. Often in army differences would famous for his work approved by the rules of "Compound of Dr. Michael and St. Therese, this quiet doctor has shown just cause for the first time explained for the jar rendered some of the wonders he has wrought.

DISCLAIMS ANY DOUBT.

"It was not I," he says, at the very beginning, "for I am only assistant. It was the great mind of the dental world evolved the technique which made it possible for injured men to return to their former state of living like they had before. Take the height and patience and nerve and skill of the surgeon, add to that the equipment that will bring the surgeon to success, in spite of setbacks and failures. Spare the bones or bones and tissue, small pieces of one and another. Know and consider the anatomy of the face, the nerves, the veins, the cartilage.

"Then you have, roughly, for the first time, the foremost approach in the range of the oral surgeons' work. It is work unique for him. In a dozen stairs laboratory at Harvard Dental School, called the 'chambers of horrors,' he offers to the student, and can see, the enormous difficulties modest Dr. Kazanjian met and overcame. 'Far-most-of-former,' volumes tell the story.

Plaster casts which line the shelves on both sides of the long cabin, and confront the spectator, in their first stage, tell the enormous tragedy of war, that, in the name of progress, improvement, that, in their last, look forth restored, and hopeful, the features again one more to gaze upon the world, from pleasant faces, from the faces of life savers.

Dr. Kazanjian explained the way in oral surgeon handles a case of facial injury, almost of war peace.

EVERY CASE A HARD ONE.

"First of all," said he, "you have to see to the general health of the man. Perhaps the whole lower portion of his face is gone. You have to prevent hemorrhage, see that you keep him alive, and that he doesn't develop septicaemia. Then you have to feed the man.

"You must remember that, in most of the cases, the patient, whether injured in war or in industrial accident, can neither eat nor speak. So a tube has to be let down his throat or inserted through his nose, to provide liquid nourishment. Then the surgery begins.

"First the oral surgeon has to see what the gunshot or the automobile accident, or the pitiless factory machine, has left in the way of bone or tissue to be patched together. Bring the shattered bones together, so hold them together by mechanical appliances, to prevent deformity. Then stitch or suture the parts, into their original shape, so nearly as you can.

"The majority of cases may be brought to decent shape in four or five weeks. When there has been loss of the lower jaw or part of the upper, or both tissue, you have your real difficulties.

PATCHWORK OF PLATES.

"The general principle of reconstruction with those who have lost much fleshy tissue, is to be patient and wait long for a good result. Tissue will grow. Lost bone may often be replaced by dental plates, new kinds which the exigency of war gave us ideas for inventing. Tissue which will not grow of itself, may be replaced by plastic operations. About the face of most adults is enough spare tissue so some may be taken from one part and added to another. This must be done.

"The aims of the plastic surgeon must be two-in milder injuries to make the surgery almost indistinguishable; in more serious injuries to make the patient's appearance pleasing—not ghastly.

"These two aims may perfectly well be achieved in every case. The surgeon, in addition, must see to it that the patient is fitted with dental appliances which shall make him able to speak, and to masticate his food. Articulation may be restored, in the cases of a shattered tongue. This is done by elongating the tongue, and cutting it, mechanically, till the 'uninjured part is as long as the whole tongue was at first."

BOON TO MANY MEN.

It is due to Dr. Kazanjian that thousands of gaps in the faces of soldiers are gladly about their work once again, not objects of terror, not curiosities, but normal looking men, restored from lives of despair by the loving skill of an American doctor, records of the France-Prussian war show hundreds of such injured who committed suicide because their injuries set them apart, instantly objects of terror." Today that is past. And today, at Harvard Dental School, Dr. Kazanjian, with his corps of helpful science, to the end that the accidents of war may be even better cared for than, already, he has cared for the accidents of war.

LOVE NOTES INTRODUCED IN FREEMAN DIVORCE CASE

7—That he carried his distrust so far that he insisted on picking her physician, and accompanying her to the office of her dentist.

WATCHED BY DETECTIVES.

8—That he accused her of being unfaithful to him, and wrote to her two daughters, aged sixteen and fourteen, that their mother was a bad woman.

9—That he caused her to be spied upon her, particularly while she was at her Summer home in East Dennis.

9—That he charged her with being a spy during the war, turning information over to government agents, and causing her to be grilled, her patriotism insulted and her feelings hurt.

6—That the basis of his alleged persecution was her failure to turn over to him $50,000 which she inherited from her father, a wealthy Worcester manufacturer.

Attorney Hall said: "We will show that the husband here went with his wife to the dentist, even when he had no dental work to be done, and that his motive was unjustified jealousy.

"We will show that when away from home he wrote letters mirroring this jealousy as well as making demands which would have reduced his wife to slavery. She was not allowed to go to the theatre or dances except on rare occasions, he objected to her friends and constantly wrote doubting her love and sincerity."

Mrs. Freeman took the stand in unhurried fashion, gave her age as thirty-seven, and said she was married in 1903. The Freemans have had four children, and two have died.

Mrs. Freeman testified that she was born in Worcester, and that when she was married her father made a settlement on her which made the early years of wedded life easy for her husband. She said that knowledge of her father's wealth had a bad effect on her husband, whom she characterized as a social climber, and that he chronically boasted of the estate which would some day be his.

When the elder Mr. Reed died, she said that her husband asked her even before burial that she make the estate over to him, and that all her troubles dated from the time she refused him.

She dated his first alleged assault on her as in 1906, in the guest room of the Dedham Country Club. Beatings had been inflicted on her several times since, she said, in the bathroom of her own home, and elsewhere.

LETTERS ARE READ.

Mrs. Freeman described her husband's alleged jealousy and his demand that he see her letters before she posted them. She read from three letters sent her in 1906, in which he expressed doubts as to her love, and made suggestions as to her companions.

Contained in these letters were such phrases as "I want you to be absolutely true to me"; "Where will we land unless we come to an understanding"; "I have been wondering while away if you love me as I love you" and "You know, I don't believe you love me anyway as you ought."

Mrs. Freeman testified that in 1906 she received the following letter from Cincinnati:

Dear Little Girl—I have not heard from you. I inquired at the postoffice but found no letter. I am a wee bit lonely. You're a naughty girl not to have written here to me. I love you so dearly I cannot thing or work when I am away from you. Telegraph me as soon as you get this. I love you better than I can tell and I want you to be absolutely true. Do not go over to the Cobbs.

Do not forget to follow every request I make of you, no matter how small. It makes me sick to think how different it is now from what it used to be. Don't you see where we'll land if each does not do the minutest thing that the other wants. Be humble and quiet and loving.

Mrs. Freeman explained that the Cobbs were her nearest neighbors in Dedham.

Another letter bearing the same date, written by Mr. Freeman, was introduced in evidence. It read:

Dearest Girl—Your telegram arrived later. I love you, little girl, very much. Do you love me as you ought to and are you as willing as you used to be to do as I wish? Kiss me good night and tell the girls what a fine mother they have.

A letter dated Atlanta, November 12, 1906, written by Dr. Freeman to his wife, was read to the court. It contained the following:

The train arrived two hours late. I had bad luck getting here. My only hope and ambition is you and you should not spoil it.

"Did you mingle freely with your neighbors from 1903 to 1910?" was asked of Mrs. Freeman by her counsel.

"No," she replied. She then explained that during those years she did not return a call or go to dances, theatres or card parties, or mingle in any way with her friends.

Q—What did he do when he followed you to your room? A—He struck me on the nose.

Q—Did your nose bleed? A—It did.

Q—Did it stain anything? A—Yes, it stained the pillow.

Q—Did your husband strike you then? A—Yes and used profane language.

Q—Was anyone else present? A—No.

Q—When was the next time he struck you? A—It was shortly after that. He struck me, choked me and threw me out of bed. He got out of bed himself and started toward his chiffonier.

Q—What was there in the chiffonier? A—His revolver.

IN HOSPITAL IN 1917.

Q—What was the next occasion on which your husband used physical force? A—It was in the Fall of 1916.

Q—What was your condition at that time? A—I was very weak and nervous.

Q—You went to the hospital in 1917? A—Yes, to a hospital in Framingham, on January 12, 1917.

Q—How long were you there? A—About two weeks.

Q—And you underwent an operation? A—I did.

Mrs. Freeman was reminded of an incident which occurred in May, 1906. She testified that her husband had obtained for her a prescription. This, she declared, she had bitterly resented.

Q—What were your feelings at this act of your husband's? A.—I was very much shocked and offended.

Q—What was your fathers business? A—He had big business interests. He made machinery and lathes.

Q—How long was he in business A.—From 1875 to 1917.

New York, Jan. 19.—The League of Nations is hopelessly deadlocked, according to the belief expressed by United States Senator James A. seventy miles an hour, and at 100 miles in squalls. He said that he saw a tug with three barges in difficulty off Nauset yesterday and proposed also seeing the cement steamer Potomac moving slowly southward over the shoals.

The United States Shipping Board steamship West Jaffrey, which went aground in the gale yesterday on East Boston flats, was pulled off today by the tugs Neptune and Pallas. She was apparently uninjured.

All the forenoon tugs were busy putting back at anchorage barges and vessels in the harbor that had dragged their anchorages.

Trolley service in the suburbs was handicapped, cars being derailed in a number of instances, and transportation on a number of small spur lines being practically given up for some hours.

On the Boston & Maine all three trains from Montreal were late. The Rutland train, due at 7.05, arrived at 9.46, while the Canadian Pacific scheduled for 7.30, came in at 8.10.

The Boston & Albany trains arriving from any distance were nearly all an hour late. The space in front of the bulletin board at the South Station was crowded by anxious commuters awaiting the late arrivals.

On the New Haven, the Federal express and the newspaper train were both more than an hour late, while other trains were even further behind schedule.

Boston shivered and skidded to work along icy sidewalks in a temperature of 8 above. Northfield, Vt., reported 22 below and Eastport, Me., 8 below.

Boston official temperatures after midnight were:

1 a. m.	11
2 a. m.	10
3 a. m.	10
4 a. m.	9
5 a. m.	8
6 a. m.	7
7 a. m.	6
8 a. m.	8

Schools were closed in the smaller towns in Middlesex County, notably Lexington and Bedford. Trolley service on the Middlesex & Boston Street Railway has been choked for more than a twenty-four hours by drifts of snow from three to seven feet deep. Bedford has been cut off entirely from street car service.

No cars have run into Concord over the Concord, Maynard & Hudson Street Railway since yesterday noon, and other towns on the line are isolated.

A jitney of the Waltham Watch Company is reported stalled between Concord and Lincoln.

Huge snow drifts caused much traffic delay on Elevated lines in the Dorchester district. Twenty-four plows were sent out to clear the tracks, but the snow at either side forced teamsters to drive in the tracks. This caused long waits in chilly cars for commuters.

Nantucket Island Cut Off By Ice; Cross Rip Lightship Caught in Floe

Buzzards Bay, Jan. 19.—With Nantucket completely ice-bound and a solid ice barrier across Vineyard Sound to Cape Cod, following the wildest gale known along the coast in many years, fears were entertained today for the fate of the Cross Rip lightship, anchored on Nantucket Shoals and reported imprisoned in the ice.

The lightship, which serves as a beacon to navigation over the shoals, stationed about halfway between Martha's Vineyard and Chatham, occupies the same position as her predecessor which was torn from its moorings by the ice two years ago, swept out to sea and lost with all on board. The present crew consists of eight men.

Coast guards along Cape Cod today reported that the weather was the most severe in the history of the service, about thirty-five years. Navigation is completely tied up, and a coast guard cutter has been at work for days in an attempt to keep open the western end of the Cape Cod Canal.

A fifty-mile gale blew almost without intermission all Sunday and through the night, abating only about 5 a. m. today. While the thermometer did not go below 6 degrees, due to means the lowest this season, yet the cold was the most severely felt of the Winter, driven home as it was by the wind.

The Nantucket steamboat is tied up at Vineyard Haven harbor. A tugboat, which with three barges had tied the ice all night in an effort to make its way around the cape over the Nantucket shoals, reported the ice from four to six feet thick.

The coast guard cutter Acushnet was at work this morning off Mashpee Island, near the western entrance of the canal, where she was ordered to assist ice-bound schooners and barges loaded with coal bound for Boston. She has been at work since Friday breaking through the ice in Buzzard's Bay, and has managed to make her way from Woods Hole to the canal, a distance of about twenty miles.

Life-savers at Cuttyhunk, the extreme western island of the Elizabeth group, about twenty miles west of Woods Hole, reported the bay filled with ice. As the bay is in places six miles wide, this makes an approximate expanse of 240 square miles of ice actually reported.

ALLEGED 'BRANDY' SALE CASE IS CONTINUED

Patrick Conley of Doolan court, South Boston, appeared before Judge Logan today, charged with selling liquor illegally and the larceny of $6 dollars from Harry Steinberg, a Broadway furniture dealer. Steinberg aimed that Conley offered to sell him a bottle of French brandy for five dollars. Steinberg said he paid the $6 dollars and asked Conley to get him. While Conley was out after it Steinberg said he tasted the "brandy" and found it to be a mixture of brown sugar and water. He filed a patrolman and the two waited for Conley, who soon returned with more of the "brandy." The case was adjourned until Saturday.

DE VALERA GIVES '26 POINTS' ON IRELAND

make it the supreme object of my life on earth to win for my country the distinction of securing now for mankind, in peace, what millions have died for, vainly, in war—justice as the basis of international right, and self-determination of nations as a principle in practice. Ireland's claim furnishes America the opportunity.

AN AMERICAN QUESTION.

5—This question of recognition is distinctly an American question. The decision is yours and yours only—yours to say whether you shall continue to recognize the government of might in Ireland, or begin now to recognize the government of right.

6—We are not asking the American government to begin meddling in this dispute between Ireland and Britain. If you say that word you have meddled. You are meddling. You are at this moment according official recognition to England's government in Ireland. You are refusing to recognize the government of right. You are recognizing the government of might, and even supporting it. The moneys borrowed from you maintain England's army of occupation in England.

7—The Irish Republic exists. Its shackles serve but to make its reality more concrete. It is not destroyed when individuals or nations plunge their heads into the sand and say they cannot see it. It is there—recognized or not, and it can be destroyed only by the power that brought it into being—the will of the Irish people.

8—When we say England we mean the British government—the English ruling classes.

"HATE RULE BY FOREIGNERS."

9—The Irish do not hate England or the English. They hate rule by the foreigner, good or badmost bitterly the bad.

10—The Irish desire peace with England as with the rest of the world. If England desired peace she would cease her usurpation in Ireland.

11—It is not the Irish who are wilfully disturbing the world's peace. It is not they who are the aggressors in the British.

12—The British can end this question in an hour by withdrawing their troops. The Irish on their side can end it only by sacrificing their nationhood and their national rights to self-determination and freedom. Which ought to yield?

13—Ireland would have to give up what is here, her own, her very life. England would only have to give up that which is not hers to keep, that which she got by robbery, and that which she persists in retaining only because of her selfishness and greed.

14—Ireland cannot will her own annihilation. It has cost her 750 years of blood and tears to hold on to her individual existence and she will not relinquish it now.

15—Empires die. Nations that have not willed their own destruction live. Ireland will be free if we have to await the end of the British Empire for it.

16—The Irish nation is one nation, not two, as homogenous as any nation on earth; but under England's dren.

influence the elements of Irish life are made to appear to repel each other.

17—Ireland's domestic differences are differences of divergent political ideals, the one national, the other imperial.

"RELIGION ONLY A PEG."

18—Religion is involved only as a rack on the pegs of which England exhibits Ireland's political differences before the world.

19—Religion is no more really at the bottom of the Irish struggle than it is at the bottom of the Egyptian, the Indian or the Koreans. The roots of all these is the same; it is nationalism versus imperialism.

DOUBLE MORRISON FUNERAL TOMORROW

The double funeral of State Representative James Morrison and wife, Ella, killed by gas at their home in Medford on Saturday, will take place tomorrow at 3 o'clock in the Forest Hills Cemetery. A large delegation from the State Legislature and the Medford city government will attend. The Medford city offices will be closed during the funeral. Flags on all Medford municipal buildings today were at half-staff.

SWAMPSCOTT MAN KILLED BY TRAIN

Gaetano Delce of No. 64 Pine street, Swampscott, was instantly killed at the Swampscott station today when struck by a Boston-bound train. Delce was attempting to cross in front of the train to take a trolley car, according to eyewitnesses. He is survived by a wife and two children on earth; but under England's dren.

BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a Harmless Substitute

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. These little olive-colored tablets are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel.

The pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong laxatives. It won't pay you to take calomel. Let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

"Headaches, "dullness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "logy" and "heavy." They "clear" clabbed brain and [illegible] 10c and 25c

Rupture Kills 7,000 Annually

Seven thousand persons each year are laid away—the burial certificate being marked "Rupture." Why? Because the unfortunate ones had neglected themselves or had been merely taking care of the sign (swelling) of the affliction and paying attention to the cause. What are you doing? Are you neglecting yourself by wearing a truss, appliance or what-ever name you choose to call it? At best, the truss is only a makeshift—a false prop against a collapsing wall—and cannot be expected to act as more than a mere mechanical support. The binding pressure retards blood circulation, thus robbing the weakened muscles of that which they need most—nourishment.

But science has found a way, and every truss sufferer in the land is invited to make a FREE test right in the privacy of their own home. The PLAPAO method is entirely unlike any other. Scientific, logical and successful beyond words for rupture the world has ever known.

The PLAPAO pad is very adhering, closely to the body, cannot possibly slip or shift out of place, therefore, needs no "cups or plates, soft as velvet—easy to apply—inexpensive. No metal band whips you with every move and strain. No straps, buckles or springs attached.

Learn how to close the ruptured opening as nature intended so the rupture CAN'T come down. Send your name today to PLAPAO Co., Block 231, St. Louis, Mo., for FREE trial Plapao and the information necessary.

Census Taker's Path Laden With Thorns and Threats

By W. E. HENDERSON,
CENSUS ENUMERATOR.

Verily the way of the census taker is hard, and when he is old he departeth from it.

Ouch is enough! The man who bobs up smiling after one round at counting the noses of Uncle Sam's family, deserves the D. S. M., the Croix de Guerre with palm, and the thanks of Congress. I know, for I was one.

Yet it's an amusing job. Plenty of sport—indoor and outdoor. All a man needs to be a good census enumerator is the gift of second sight, the dip'unnacy of a foreign minister, the manners of a Chesterfield, the courage of a V. D. veteran, the skill of a handwriting expert, the patience of Job and the optimism of Polyanna. For equipment, he needs a magnifying glass, a good club or gun, an electric flashlight and a map of the world.

He must be a mind reader to decide which of conflicting answers is the right one; must be suave in manner, to mollify injured feelings and coax information that is given unwillingly; must possess the ability to estimate at a glance the age of indignant ladies, all the way from their teens to nineties.

The flashlight is to find the way by night through dark alleys and byways; the magnifying glass to distinguish whether certain scrawls submitted are names of people or maps of their native land, and the weapon to defend himself from the house dog.

For the census enumerator is not as welcome as the flowers in May—don't think it. Sometimes he has to remind the "lady of the house"—and the man, too—that there is a penalty for refusing information. And while he is establishing his credentials cute little Fido or austere-looking Rover, is on the job. The mistress of the house will inform him that Fido is perfectly harmless, but Fido looks at you with the same expression that she does herself—ready to bite.

"BLIND," BUT COULD SEE.

The map is no joke—you really need that, for in the war poor old Europe was so carved up that foreign residents must tell in what province they were born, and they often don't know. The Irish are an exception, for they can always tell you their country, although it is not required.

To the question "Where were you born?" they will say, not "Ireland," but "County Cork," "County Donegal," "County Kilkenny," and so on. Take this from me—the Irish were the brightest of all the kinds of people I met with in my rounds; they were among the most intelligent and the readiest in their replies.

Some people aren't capable of giving a direct answer to a plain question.

One of the questions on the individual slip is:

"Is this person blind (both eyes)?"

Some woman had written on her blank:

"Yes, both eyes." I asked to see this person, and found a girl about 8 wearing "specs." I asked her to remove them and then said: "Can you see now?"

"Sure I can see you," she answered, "but I can't sew on black cloth at night."

She was not blind, and I congratulated her on having officially regained her sight.

One question gave a lot of trouble: "Relationship to head of family with whom you live?"

About all the adults claimed to be the head of the family. Especially in lodging houses. Sometimes as many as thirty or forty people living in one building would all claim to be the "head of the family."

Question No. 9, asking what sex the person is, would be answered, "I am a lady," "A lone woman" or "Just married."

When I asked people their color they would get indignant.

AGE QUERY MADDENS LADIES.

But the big question was that of women's ages. Some said, some refused to answer, some answered under protest, some just naturally told fibs. One woman said:

"Oh, dear, do I have to answer that horrid question?" At last she said, "I'll not tell you. You can put down what you think is right."

I placed her in my mind as not much over thirty, but I wrote down "forty-five." When I was going she asked me what I had written, and I showed her. Then she laughed and said I was a poor judge. She was "only thirty-eight" on her coming birthday. So I put her down as thirty-seven, but if I had guessed thirty-five, say, in the first place, I wouldn't have found out her right age. There's one of the places you need a little diplomacy.

"Marital condition" is one of the questions. People get that word mixed up with "marital." Some of the answers I got were: "In the army," "good" and "American."

I was taken for everything, from a book agent to tax collector, from an insurance solicitor to a secret service officer after "Reds," or an income tax collector. Often I had to go back to the same house again and again to get information about some member who wasn't home. Sometimes I would happen that in covering my district I would ring the same bell twice, and then what a hubbub!

"What! Are you 'round again? I guess you all the census you want the first time! I guess you've lost your senses, Mister."

I did my allotted work in twelve days, working morning, noon and night week days and Sundays. Often I'd work till midnight and be up and at it against at 7 in the morning. A great job, if you don't weaken—but, as I said before, once is enough.

MATTHEW G. SULLIVAN MARRIES MEDFORD GIRL

Mary Louise Grady, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Grady, No. 87 Farragut avenue, Medford, and Matthew G. Sullivan of West Somerville were married at the Immaculate Conception Church, Medford, by Rev. Timothy C. Sullivan of St. Vincent's Parish, South Boston, cousin of the bridegroom.

Mrs. Sullivan attended the parochial schools of Malden and is a graduate of Whittier Academy, Merrimac. Mr. Sullivan is a graduate of Somerville High School and was in the class of 1913, at Boston College. During the war he was appointed as traffic expert at Washington, where he directed the transportation of materials for the Quartermaster Corps. He is now salesmanager of the Hearst Magazines in New England. The couple will resid in Medford upon returning from their honeymoon trip.

BURGLAR ALARM PROTECTS COL. GREEN'S RUM

New Bedford, Jan. 19.—An elaborate burglar alarm system has been installed in a lonely farmhouse in South Dartmouth to protect a priceless stock of liquor, owned by Colonel Edward H. R. Green, son of the late Hetty Green.

The liquid treasure, which in the days of freedom was worth $40,000, according to antiquarians, is now beyond price, and no effort too much to be expended in arranging for its protection.

Gongs that can be heard for a mile have been installed in such a way that they will rouse the countryside upon the opening of a door or window. In addition, a careless soul in a family trying to get in the house, which is a veritable arsenal.

"The Jewels of Bacchus," as the stock is known, has had an adventurous career, from the time of their purchase by Colonel Green last Summer. Placed aboard the steam yacht United States, that craft struck a ledge in Pandanaram Harbor and went over on her side. The cargo was salvaged and placed in a storehouse in this city.

Then came national prohibition, which forced Colonel Green to remove his treasure before January 16, and install it in the farmhouse, at the Round Hill Farm.

New Method of Reducing Fat

A news item from abroad informs us that the American method of producing a slim, trim figure is meeting with astonishing success. This system, which has made such a wonderful impression over there, must be the Marmola Prescription Tablet method of reducing fat. It is safe to say that we have nothing better for this purpose in this country. Anything that will reduce the excess flesh two, three or four pounds a week, without injury to the stomach, the causing of wrinkles, the help of exercising or dieting, or interference with one's meals is a mighty important and useful addition to civilization's necessities. Just such a catalogue of good results, however, follow the use of these pleasant, harmless and economical little fat reducers. The easy economical because Marmola Prescription Tablets (made in accordance with the famous prescription) can be obtained of any druggist or the makers, the Marmola Co., 564 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich., for one dollar the large case, which is a decidedly economical price considering the number of tablets each case contains. They are harmless.

PLYMOUTH LIQUID HAS ODOR ALL ITS OWN

Plymouth, Jan. 19.—A five gallon bottle of liquid, found in Clifton street following the Cohasset-Plymouth basketball game Saturday night, today engaged the attention of Joe Richardson, Plymouth's town detective. It certainly looks like cider, Richardson and other members of the police force admitted, but there were raisins floating on the top and an odor that caused the jailer to hurriedly raise the windows after some one had removed the cork. No one, however, had courage to taste it. "The police said they believed the potent odor to be due to yeast.

Why Newly Discovered Necessity Should be in Every Home

Newly Discovered Health Necessity—"Internal Hygiene"—Explained

Hygiene—the preservation of health—has long been practiced with respect to teeth, mouth and throat. Antiseptic and germicide pastes, powders and liquids are used by all careful people.

If germs in the mouth cause tooth decay and other ailments how much more freely will they breed inside the body—in the intestinal organs—where they are hidden and can ply their evil workings unseen and unheeded?

For the purpose of providing a laxative of pleasant taste, mild and thorough action which, at the same time, would tend to sterilize and disinfect the digestive tract and help provide protection against the germs which breed in the intestines, Partola—"The Doctor in Candy Form"—has been invented.

Because Partola has this double purpose and comes in the form of delicious, palatable peppermint lozenges, it is not to be confused with ordinary old-fashioned laxatives.

Remember—there is nothing "just the sense" or "just as good" as Partola.

All good druggists sell Partola candies in 25c, 50c and $1.00 boxes. Get yours from your druggist today.

Tommy Murphy of Chicago (at left), and middleweight champion, Mike O'Dowd.

MURPHY IS OUT TO WIN OVER O'DOWD

By RINGSIDE

Middleweight Champion Mike O'Dowd will defend his title when he meets Stockyards Tommy Murphy of Chicago in a twelve-round bout at the Armory A. A.'s show at Mechanics Building tomorrow night. It is the first time a champion has risked his title in a Boston ring since Freddy Welsh, former boss of the lightweights, battled Freddy Welp and Matty Baldwin in bouts here more than five years ago.

Murphy is already on the scene of the contest. He engaged in a workout at a local gymnasium today and feels sure that he will give the St. Paul marvel the battle of his career.

O'Dowd is due to arrive in this city early this evening. He is in splendid condition for tomorrow night's tussle as a result of engaging in no-decision matches throughout the country.

EXPERT CONLEY TO REFEREE.

Larry Conley, the regular Armory A. A. referee, will probably be the third man in the ring. If Murphy has the best of the going, Conley will not hesitate to render the decision which will make a new champion.

Murphy looks every bit the part of a fighting man. He is a rugged, well set-up youth and as strong as the proverbial lion. He has been boxing for the past five years and has improved steadily.

O'Dowd is one of the boxers who has clashed with the Chicago middleweight. Their contest was staged two years ago and went ten rounds. At one time Murphy has his opponent on the canvas.

Since then Murphy has improved a great deal. His added experience is sure to stand him in good stead tomorrow night. O'Dowd, on the other hand, was probably as good a fighter two years ago as he is today.

Boston fans who have witnessed Murphy battle in Western rings feel confident that the Chicago star will be on his feet battling strong when festivities end.

As Murphy can punch, there is always a chance of his getting over the big wallop. Joe Eagan proved that O'Dowd will go to the canvas if hit hard enough in the right spot. In the last tussle between O'Dowd and Eagan in Boston, the Dorchester middleweight scared a clean knockdown in the twelfth round. A right-hand wallop to the jaw turned the trick.

O'Dowd's type of milling has always made a hit with the fans. He is a tireless, two-handed fighter who is forcing the issue every second he is in the ring. He can take a punch as well as give one.

Murphy also made a reputation as a rough fighter. The big fellows like Jamaica Kid have got worried him any more than the middleweights.

STIRRING BOUT LOOKED FOR.

The dope points to the battle being a torrid affair with both men on their feet when the affair ends. O'Dowd's class may enable him to get the decision, but if he does land the award Murphy declares the champion will realize he has been in a regular battle.

As both O'Dowd and Murphy are members of the American Legion and served with General Pershing's forces overseas, a large number of service men are sure to be on hand to cheer for their buddies.

Newman Reagan of Brockton will have Burt Jones, Revere boxer, as an opponent in the semi-final of eight rounds. There will also be a couple of preseason affairs.

SAYS AMERICAN SCHOOLS ARE TOO FAST

Too Many Methods Being Tried Lucia Simpson of London Tells Ministers

Miss Lucia Simpson of London pleaded for better wages for school teachers in an address today before the Congregational ministers in Pilgrim Hall. Miss Simpson is on a three months' trip to this country studying the educational methods carried on in America. She is a member of the London Educational Board and is impressed with many of the methods pursued in the institutions of this country.

"You are in too much of a hurry in America, with your different methods of education," she said.

"In all methods of education you must hasten slowly. After the war when so many of our young men did not return, we in England found ourselves confronted with the problem how to supply the places of these young men in many commercial centres?

"The boys already coming along were not able to hold them, and then we knew that there was something radically wrong with some of our educational methods. Of course, you have in this country the question of immigration, and what I saw American was doing in other cities toward educating different races, impressed me greatly.

"I find you are devotees to experimentation. You spend too much time to work out the best system.

"Vocational education is no new idea with us any more than a coat of paint.

"Your public spirit is more aggressive than ours. You are giving the masses the help that they sorely need. You do not want to change the curriculum of the American school, but the attitude of the American public needs readjustment."

She claimed that the public schools of England, now under control of the state, are becoming more popular.

Wants $30,000 for Charity

The Brookline Friendly Society today started a house-to-house canvass in an effort to raise $30,000 for charitable purposes. The work will extend throughout the week.

MEDICAL SERVICES FREE FOR POOR WOMAN

An act of charity was performed by Dr. Paul Jackmauh of No. 505 East Broadway, South Boston, at the suggestion of an American reporter. A widow, who works for her living and was the recipient of one of the American's Christmas baskets, was stricken with pneumonia. The reporter told Dr. Jackmauh of the case, and the latter went to the house and is still attending the woman without hope of receiving fee.

Rheumatism Relief--25c.

Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets), Are Helping Thousands Who Tried Expensive Things Without Result. It's Guaranteed.

There are three vital processes of human existence—the digestion of food, the extraction of nourishment from it and the elimination of waste.

Poor digestion and assimilation means failure to derive full nourishment from food and that in turn often means impoverished blood, weakness, anemia, etc. Poor elimination means an accumulation of waste matter which poisons the body, lowers vitality, decreases the power of resistance to disease and leads to the development of many serious ills.

Rheumatism—due to some interference with the process of elimination, failure to get rid of certain body poisons,—cannot be expected to yield to any medicine that fails to correct the condition responsible for it. Could any reasonable person expect to rid himself of rheumatic pain as long as rheumatic poison is allowed to remain in the body.

Think of this. It explains the success of Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets). In so many cases where other medicines have failed, thousands are using NR Tablets every day and getting relief. Why pay five or ten times as much for uncertain things? A 25c box of Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets), containing enough to last twenty-five days, must give you relief, must give you prompt relief and satisfactory benefit or cost you nothing.

Nature's Remedy is not only for the relief of rheumatism. It improves digestion, tones the liver, regulates kidney and bowel action, improves the blood and cleanses the system. You've tried the expensive medicines and doctors, now make the real test. You'll get results this time. Just try it. Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) is sold, guaranteed and recommended by your druggist.

DEBATE SENDING MUNITIONS TO FOES OF REDS

Russian Situation Proves to Be Weighty Problem for Supreme Council

By International News Service.

Paris, Jan. 19.—The question of supplying war material to anti-Bolshevik forces in Southern Russia, was taken up by the Supreme Council today. There was an impressive list of statesmen and military representatives at the morning meeting and the Russian situation was discussed at length.

Those in attendance were: Premier Lloyd George, former Premier Clemenceau, Hugh Wallace, the United States Ambassador to France; Winston Churchill, British Secretary of War; A. Bonar Law, Marshal Foch, Sir Henry Wilson of the British General Staff, and Walter Home Long, first lord of the British Admiralty.

Requests from Georgian and Azzadian delegates for munitions and other war supplies for use against the Bolshevik armies were taken under consideration.

Marshal Foch and Sir Henry Wilson both presented military reports.

The Supreme Council will meet again tomorrow to decide whether to give aid to prevent Baku, in the Caucasus, from falling into the hands of the Russian Soviet army.

It was not decided during the morning whether M. Clemenceau would continue to sit as a member of the council. It is probable that a formal decision on the matter will be announced before the council meets again tomorrow.

Blood Famine at the City Hospital Is No More

The blood famine has lifted.

And the doctors rejoice. For, following a little paragraph in the American Saturday, in which it was stated that the doctors at the City Hospital were prepared to pay $25 for a pint of good, tested blood, the hospital was overwhelmed Sunday and today with eager, interested blood donors.

At last the City Hospital has plenty of good Democratic, free trade blood; plenty of protective tariff, Republican blood, enough for tests and everything, at $25 the pint.

SALEM TO DEFY GOVERNOR ON JITNEYS

Will Let People Decide Which Kind of Transportation They Want

Salem, Jan. 19.—A conflict of authority is inevitable between Governor Coolidge and the people of Salem, relative to the jitney situation here.

This appeared today, when it was known that the Chamber of Commerce would take no action to stop the special election on the jitney question, set for January 27.

This election is to learn whether the people want jitney or street car service, and whether they will fight the decision of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company, not to compete with jitneurs.

As Governor Coolidge has already ordered the jitneys off the streets and the street cars back on, the election is without purpose unless the city authorities intend to fight in the courts, which it is intimated they will do.

The railroads are indispensable to our whole economic life, and railway securities are at the very heart of most investments, large and small, public and private, by individuals and by institutions.

WOODROW WILSON

THE war could not have been won without railroads.

Transport—by rail and sea—is an indispensable arm of national defense.

Carrying capacity, from the wheat fields and the mines and the steel mills to the front lines in France, was the measure of our power in war.

And it is the measure of our power in peace.

Industrial expansion—increasing national prosperity—greater world trade—are vitally dependent on railroad growth.

The limit to the productive power of this country is the limit set by railroad capacity to haul the products of our industry.

The amount of freight carried on American rails doubled from 1897 to 1905—since that year it has doubled again.

It will double still again.

To haul this rapidly growing traffic the country must have more railroads—more cars and engines—more tracks and terminals.

Sound national legislation, broad-visioned public regulation, will encourage the expansion of railroads, without which the nation cannot grow.

TRAP AT 17TH HOLE CAUSED DEFEAT OF KIRKBY

By ROBERT E. HARLOW.

In the rush at a national championship to tell about the great deeds of the winners, the unhappy incidents of the losers are forgotten, yet their story of failure is often as entertaining as the other fellow's yarn of success.

When a favorite fails to play his game in competition, the affair is spoken of as an "upset" and the story tellers pass along to consider the others. Thus at the 1919 national championship at Oakmont, the failure of Oswald Kirkby, one of America's finest amateur golfers, to qualify for the match play, was set down at the time as an "upset," and the writers promptly forgot about it.

Back in New York, however, the business associates of Kirkby and a host of metropolitan district golfers, were stunned when their star did not score well enough in the thirty-six-hole medal play round to get into the match play, and they sought more retail.

HAD PLAYED CONSISTENTLY.

Kirkby, it must be remembered, was the favorite of the New York delegation. He had won the metropolitan title and played the most consistent golf all year of any of the New Yorkers. His friends even backed him, at proper odds, to win the tournament. Kirkby himself was confident that he would go far at Oakmont.

On Saturday when the preliminary round of eighteen holes was shot the Englewood star scored an 83, which left him well inside the group of some seventy players who returned the sixty-three best cards, and all those who were tied for the sixty-fourth place. These golfers continued Monday in the regular qualifying round of thirty-six holes, to eliminate all but thirty-two, who were to continue in the match play rounds.

RAINED HARD.

It rained hard on Monday. The players came to the clubhouse drenched. Kirkby finished the morning round in the high eighties and did not enjoy the lunch hour. What a difference at the lunch hour on qualifying day at the national amateur in the attitude of the players who have completed their first eighteen holes in 80 or better and those who are near the ninety mark and a trifle more than the hard task before them in the afternoon, if they hope to get into the match play.

Kirkby, although capable of shooting Oakmont in the seventies, was not in an altogether pleasing mood when he teed up on the second eighteen in the afternoon. He was worried and nervous, and the rain added to his discomfiture. He wanted to get the round played. He knew he would have to show real class on the eighteen or wait until 1920 for a crack at the title.

UP AGAINST KIRKBY.

Fate was evidently against the New Yorker, for he could not get into the low-scoring streak he longed for, but kept plugging along, fighting for everything he got and just keeping on the edge of what he knew he would be the limit score of those who would continue play Tuesday. His wife plodded out in the rain to ask him if he considered her presence would help him? He replied that he could not do any worse, so Mrs. Kirkby stayed with him and trudged along in the downpour.

The seventeenth hole at Oakmont measures 275 yards. A deep and cunning trap guards the front approach to the pin, and the gap reaches well around in front of the green. This trap was the only spot at Oakmont in which Bobby Jones lost his temper.

Kirkby arrived at the seventeenth tee, the thirty-fifth hole of his qualifying round, realizing that only a strong finish would make it possible for him to qualify. He figured that with a three and a four he might do it, or on an outside chance that two fours might do it, or at least put him in a payoff for a position in the match play round.

ROLLED INTO TRAP.

He wanted a three on the seventeenth, so he pounded his drive for the green, and he had enough behind the ball to have reached, only the shot was not quite straight enough, and, instead of rolling gently upon the green, it rolled into the cunning trap.

Next we find the metropolitan champion standing in the pit, muddy rubber in hands. The pin was not far from the edge of the trap and stuck up directly ahead of Kirkby's ball. In order to get out of the trap and hold the ball near enough for a good chance to sink a putt for his coveted three, Kirkby knew he would have to smother the urge from the ball, and not hit it hard enough to get up and out.

Kirkby gave that shot a long looking over. His wife and a few other interested people were standing by, giving their mental support to the effort.

CUT UNDER BALL.

Kirkby cut under the ball. Wet sand flew about. Then Mrs. Kirkby was disappointed and Kirkby—well, there the ball was rolling back down the side of the trap to nestle in a worse lie than before. It had just failed to clear the trap.

There was another effort which failed, and when Kirkby did get the thing out, he had lost the perfect control needed for the shot, struck it heavy and it went too far. He was finally down in eight. He played the thirty-sixth with an Eva Tanguay "I don't care" but, of course, got a perfect four. His total was 83. Those players who scored 172 contested in a play-off for three places in the match play rounds.

Kirkby is not easily discouraged and he knows now that another national championship will be played at the Engineers' Club this year.

Following his return to New York Kirkby went to it with some joshing by his business associates. They all believe implicitly in their friend's golfing ability, and some of them were among those who backed him to win, but they took him on a bit, just the same, although they promptly sit upon any outsider who dares to criticise Kirkby's game.

WAY AT LAST HOLE.

The Metropolitan champion listened to his mates for a time and in order to end their chatter decided to take them all out on a golf course and play their home town 72 a copper. After some difficulty a course was obtained for the match. It was St. Albans, a new club in the district.

The players went out in a foursome and a foursome, the foursome with Kirkby in it following behind the foursome. The nine business associates came to the seventeenth hole, with Kirkby one down. Again the Metropolitan golfer was faced with a proposition of doing great things on the final two holes or losing out of it, so to speak. This time he came through.

The seventeenth and eighteenth at St. Albans are around the 400-yard mark, both par fours, but Oswald was mad and he scored a three on the seventeenth, making the match all even, and scored another three on the home green, to win, 1 up.

The night business associaton have stopped joshing Kirkby. One of them said the other day:

"Say, good as I am, I halved two holes with Kirkby, when we all played him at St. Albans."

Yokel, Instead of Kilonis, to Meet Ketonen

Mike Yokel, former world's middleweight champion, replaces John Kilonis, the Greek cyclone, against Waino Ketonen in the main event in Mechanics Building tonight, the change being made because of a cold contracted by Kilonis while training. Yokel, who was here, trained to the minute, to meet the winner of the original contest, gladly accepted the chance, and in view of the fact that Ketonen won the title from Yokel, the change appears to promise some great work by both lions.

Kilonis, up to last night, felt that he would be able to wrestle, but Promoter Tuohey held that unless the Greek was at his best, it would be unfair to the wrestling fans to permit him to meet Ketonen.

Yokel accepts all the conditions of the original match and is very confident he can recover his lost title.

A strong set of preliminaries will precede the main event, the whole promising a fine night of wrestling.

GOLF

Chicago golfers will pay considerably more for their sport in 1920 than in 1919, according to action which is being taken by practically all clubs in that district at annual meetings.

In 1919, the average dues of ten leading clubs amounted to $225. The highest figure was Beverly at $400, and the lowest Olympia Fields at $75. Olympia Fields club has gone up to $125 for 1920 and other clubs have increased from $50 to $100.

The Chicago golfers figured that where it formerly cost $7,500 to keep eighteen holes in good playing condition, it now requires $15,000. The clubs also are forced to make both ends meet without the revenue which was obtained from duffers at the 19th hole.

Four new public golf courses will be opened for Chicago golfers in the Spring, and it is estimated that 1,000,000 tickets will be issued for starters on the public courses there in 1920.

Golf is gaining many friends among the ministry, although it is seldom a doctor of divinity participates in tournament play. An exception occurred at the Newark, Ohio, Club, where Rev. Dr. L. P. Franklin won the club championship and was awarded a gold medal and a $100 loving cup.

TECH BOXERS FAST ROUNDING INTO SHAPE

With boxing now listed as a minor sport, the glove-wielders at Technology are fast getting into trim for their several bouts of the season. About sixty men are trying out for two positions on the varsity squad, and there is keen competition among the candidates for the regular berths.

GREEN TINGE TO HOCKEY GAMES THIS WEEK

Pavilion Schedule

Wednesday—Dartmouth Club vs. Harvard varsity.
Friday—Dartmouth varsity vs. Tufts; Yankee Division vs. B. A. A. (League game).
Saturday—Dartmouth varsity vs. Harvard varsity.

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

Patrons of the Ice Pavilion will be seeing green this week—Dartmouth Green—for on each and every evening in which hockey is played some representative of the Wah-Hoo-Wah institute of learning in Hanover, N. H., will perform on the local rink.

On Wednesday night the Dartmouth Club, with the Harvard varsity as its opponent. On Friday evening it's the Dartmouth varsity, in a contest with Tufts. And, on Saturday night, it's the Dartmouth varsity again, this time with the Harvard varsity as its rival.

These three matches, with the Yankee Division-B. A. A. League game which serves as the second half of Friday night's double-header, comprises one of the most attractive puck-propelling programs yet offered on the new indoor ice area, and with the scheduled reduction in admission prices going into effect, capacity crowds on all three evenings seem assured.

CRIMSON VS. GREEN.

Despite the attractiveness of the Wednesday and Friday night bookings, however, it will be in the Dartmouth varsity-Harvard varsity contest that greater interest will converge. Harvard's cancelling of football relations with the Green failed to make negative the very natural rivalry that exists between these two schools, and the interest with which this game is awaited is fully as marked as that evidenced prior to Saturday night's Harvard-Yale set-to.

Because of Harvard's victory over the Blue, Dartmouth's keenness for capturing the contest has been all the more sharpened; and, as the Green possesses a sterling varsity sextet, a game as full of thrills as was the recent Crimson-Blue battle seems in store for those fortunate enough to make early reservations at the Pavilion.

The Harvard varsity broke into the winning column at the most satisfactory time for Harvard men. What matters it to the latter if three defeats were administered to the Crimson by club teams, so long as its players registered a victory over Yale. However, members of the Harvard team, at least, seem to remain on the winning side, and this week they are going to be hard pressed to do so.

COLLEGE LEAD AT STAKE.

The Dartmouth Club team which just now is rivalling the Harvard Club for the lead in the Amateur Hockey League, is the third opponent of the Crimson varsity, and Wednesday night's game between these two should produce an exceptionally speedy brand of the sport. Then, if Harvard does manage to win this game, there will come the match with the Dartmouth varsity, on which will depend the lead in the Intercollegiate hockey standing.

The two leading collegiate defensive combinations in the country will be when Harvard meets Dartmouth when Harvard meets Dartmouth. Stubbs, Walker and Holmes are Harvard's entries, and Dorney, Fiske and Gale are Dartmouth's, and on their play in the meeting may depend their selection to the All-College sextet annually made by hockey experts.

BUSY WEEK FOR SCHOOL TEAMS ON TAP

The schoolboy athletes are in for an active week, with hockey games or track and swimming meets taking place.

The chief attractions will be the Somerville High and Newton High hockey game, the M. I. T. vs. Huntington School swim and the interscored track meet at the East Armory between West Roxbury, Charlestown, South Boston, Malden, Lynn and Dorchester High.

There were two events on the schedule for today, the dual track meet between the Boston Trade School and the Hyde Park High and the hockey game of Roxbury Latin vs. the Country Day School. The track meet will take place at the East Armory. The Hyde Park team has Gene Hussey as its star sprint man. The Roxbury Latin-Country Day hockey game was to be played at the Country Day rink.

The only event on the list for Tuesday is the Y. M. C. A. and Reading hockey game, which will be played at the Reading High pond. Three high class games are on the hockey schedule for Wednesday. Rindge Tech will go to Exeter to meet the Academy team, Melrose will go to Andover Academy and Somerville will play at Newton High. Melrose High will take a classy scrub to play against the Andover team and it would not be surprising if they should come home with a win. Although the Melrose team has lost its last two games, they have some clever stick wielders who will make the Andover team travel at their best. Somerville and Newton will meet in an interscholastic league contest at the Newton rink. Waverly, Simpson, Touloute and McPhail have been doing some fine work for the Red and Blue seven, while Coady and Crosby of the Newton team will bear a lot of watching.

Tufts has the first call Thursday with two good meets on the schedule. The Huntington School, which won from Dorchester High last week, will meet the Allen Military School and the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium. The Huntington School in their first meet showed a well-developed team which is sure to make a fine showing in the scholastic circles this season. The five-cornered meet between West Roxbury, Charlestown, South Boston, English High and Dorchester will be the first real meet of the season.

Brookline High will travel to Lynn Friday to meet the Lynn English track team, while the Brookline hockey team will meet Cambridge Latin seven on the same day. The other event on the schedule for Friday is the M. I. T. and Huntington School meet.

MAHER PICKED TO DEFEAT MOONEY

By JACK CONWAY.

Frankie Maher, Brooklyn lightweight is picked by many of the close followers of the ring game hereabouts to win over Johnny Mooney of Newton in their twelve-round bout at the Suffolk A. A.'s show at Hibernian Hall, Roxbury, tonight.

Maher, like Mooney, has been a ring sensation. At Newport six weeks ago he flattened George Brown of New York, one of the niftiest lightweights to the East. There is no doubting Brown's class as he is the youth who beat Charley Parker in Philadelphia recently.

The Brooklyn youth is young, strong and ambitious. As he can punch as well as box, Mooney will have to put up a great battle if he is to finish in front.

The Newton youth is not worrying about the outcome of the mill. He has been going on high since getting a draw with Harry (Kid) Brown of Philadelphia. He beat Al Calmont, while he lasted Al Ketchel and Harry Glynn. Mooney is a tireless, two-handed scrapper with a punch, and believes that he will win a place among the blue-ribbon steppers by disposing of Maher.

Benny Murphy, who manages Maher, says the latest addition to his stable of boxers is a live wire. As Benny manages Frankie Callahan and Chick Simler he is in a position to air his thoughts on affairs pugilistic.

Dan McCormack, East Boston boxer, will oppose Willie Corbett of Somerville in the semi-final of ten rounds. The boys will weigh in at 124 pounds. This tussle will be the most important Corbett has yet engaged in. The Technology student has piled up a creditable array of victories and believes his skill and speed will enable him to dispose of McCormack. The latter is a veteran campaigner and intends to try for a kayo.

Teddy Murphy of Roxbury will meet Tommy Marks of the North End in an eight-round bout. Young Farrell of Newton and Jack O'Leary of Cambridge will box six rounds, while Johnny Thomas of South Boston and Jimmy O'Brien of Roxbury are also billed to travel the six-round route.

Reservations may be secured at No. 156 Tremont street, room 20.

There will be another big scrap at Mechanics Building Wednesday night when Joe Welch of Lynn and Louis Bogash, who hails from Bridgeport, will be the principals over the ten-round route. The affair will be staged under the direction of the Fenway A. A.

The winner of Wednesday night's encounter will be matched to meet Young Kirby. When Doyle and Bogash clashed at Brockton a couple of months ago, the latter won the decision. Doyle is naturally out to get revenge while Bogash is eager to win again so that he will get the date with Y. D. champion.

Pal Reed will resume operations in the ring when he meets Johnny McLaughlin of Philadelphia in a twelve-round bout at Framingham tonight. Reed declares the hand he injured in his tussle with Slim Martin is as good as ever as he will prove this to McLaughlin in a stiff punched and good boxer and is sure to make things interesting for the local star.

Entries for the St. Thomas Catholic Club amateur bouts, which will be held tonight at Leo XIII. Hall, Jamaica Plain, will be received during the day by John J. Norton at No. 17 South street, Jamaica Plain. Some fine prizes have been offered and there is plenty of opportunity for good performers to grab some honors.

First America Cup Race to Occur July 18

London, Jan. 15.—Sir Thomas Lipton has announced that he received notice from the New York Yacht Club that his latest challenge for the America's cup has been accepted and that July 18 next has been fixed as the date of the first race. The races are to be held over the Sandy Hook course, which is Sir Thomas' choice.

REYNOLDS TO COACH BUCKNELL GRID TEAM

Lewisburg, Pa., Jan. 19.—Bucknell's athletic committee announces the re-engagement of C. W. P. (Pete) Reynolds of Syracuse as football coach for next season. Reynolds successfully handled the Orange and Blue eleven during the past season and the demand for his return was unanimous.

WHITEY FITZGERALD IN BATTLE WITH DOWNES

Whitey Fitzgerald of New York will have Cleveland Johnny Downes as an opponent in a twelve-round bout at the Pine Tree A. C. of Portland Wednesday night. Fitzgerald recently engaged in a stirring battle with Shaver O'Brien at Portland, while Downes has piled up a creditable array of victories since coming East.

GOLF, A WELL-READ SPORT DURING WINTER MONTHS

By WALTER C. HAGEN,
Open Golf Champion.

Now that this is the good old Winter time and a lot of us have laid away our clubs, one would think that the mere mention of golf might be irritating, but I find that this is not true. Golf magazines claim that they find no lack of interest in the off season—if indeed there is an off season in golf. The reason for this is that golf literature, like all other literature, finds more of a sale from November to April than from April to November. This is, of course, due to the long Winter evenings, when a man can sit comfortably by the fireside with his pipe and his favorite periodical. Often times this favorite periodical is a golf magazine or a golf book, perhaps, which is just as good.

As I said before in another article, not all of us can go South and those who stay at home must be entertained in some way. All Summer long the golfer is busy. He finds that he must put in extra hours at the office in order to get more time on the links, so with business and recreation in the open air, he has little time left to devote to his golf magazine.

After giving the magazine the "once over" as the cartoonists say, he tosses it aside, but not into the waste paper basket. The magazines are kept for another moment when time is not so pressing. Usually they accumulate and the host is on the pumpkin and indoors is more comfortable in the evenings than outdoors.

READ AS WELL AS PLAY.

When the family gathers around the fireside father is there too with the golf magazine, unless mother has beat him to it. In these days both father and mother play golf and both father and mother read golf. The daily papers keep them abreast of the times in the Summer and accounts of tournaments and minor golf happenings keep them supplied with all that they need to know. But when Winter sets in and the snow and ice block the fairways and the putting greens, and the storm doors are put up to keep out the cold winds, there is no news of tournaments and few minor happenings unless the news comes from the Southland.

But, golf reading is to be a big part of the Winter's time, because father now has time to look up the way Braid hits that low wind chester shot, but kept putting off from week to week. It is also a pleasure to go over the story of the open and the amateur championship and read again in detail some expert's opinion. He had always intended to read that article on the different kind of grasses on the course, and he had intended, too, to read all about how a golf course is constructed and some facts gathered together by some well-known golf course architect. Now is the golden opportunity for getting deeper into the literature of the game.

Some time ago I was asked who bought all of the golf books put on the market. With Vardon and his many books published, Braid with two or three, and Taylor with more than one, surely there would be more than enough to go around. But this is not half of them. Most of the great amateurs on the other side of the Atlantic have issued books, and they have had a good sale, too. Golf critics have had their say in paste-board covers, and they, too, have sold. And then, added to this is a very large number of golf books put on the market each year that are worth reading. I will defy anyone to read a golf book and then tell me honestly that he did not get a thing out of it worth remembering.

VARDON'S SAGE ADVICE.

In some of his books Harry Vardon has written golfing terms that are worth repeating. Someone before Vardon doubtless said the same thing, but not in the same way. Here are some credited to the great master that are worth cutting out and pasting in your hat:

"Keep the head steady and do not let the left heel turn outward. The body then can only wind up when the arms go back."

"Let the club head lead, the left wrist turning inward, the arms following the club head and the right hip turning next."

"Don't throw the arms forward as you start to come down, as though you were mowing grass. Rather throw them back and let them come around in their own way."

"Keep the head still until the club has struck the ball. Don't be in a hurry to look out."

These are all good but other stars have something to offer that will suit most of us. Bobby Jones, Georgs Duncan says, in speaking about grips, "Avoid getting the hands too much underneath the club, or you will slice for a certainty."

Again he says, "golfers who use the flat swing get perhaps a little more distance but often it results in an uncertain style of golf."

JAY GOULD INJURED PLAYING COURT TENNIS

Tuxedo, N. Y., Jan. 19.—An accident to Jay Gould, world's court tennis champion, abruptly ended his exhibition match with Walter A. Kinsella, which was played before a large gallery at the Tuxedo Tennis and Racquet Club, Tuxedo. The accident occurred at a dramatic moment when the champion was endeavoring to score his final points to defeat Kinsella in three straight sets.

In attempting to make a quick return of one of Kinsella's shots Gould struck his racket on the wall hard, opening up a deep gash on his forehead, over his right eye.

Something About Olives

LIKE other fruit trees, the olive tree has many enemies including birds and insects. The most dreaded of these is a small fly called dacus cleoe, half the size of a house fly. It is calculated that a single fly will destroy 300 or 400 olives. The only remedy is to gather the fruit early, and by crushing it at once destroy the larvae.

THE CINEMA MURDER

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

A Thrilling Mystery Film Serial of Love and Poverty With the Scene Laid in London and New York

"The Cinema Murder" in motion pictures, with Miss Marion Davies as the charming heroine, a Cosmopolitan production, is being shown this week at the Bowdoin Square Theatre in Boston and at theatres in several surrounding cities. Screened under direction of George D. Baker. Presented by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation as a Paramount-Arteraft Picture.

CHAPTER IV.

It was a few minutes after six that evening when Philip was conscious of a knock at his door. He swung around in his chair, blinking a little.

"Come in!"

Martha Grimes entered. She was in outdoor apparel, that is to say she wore her hat and a long mackintosh. She remained standing upon the threshold.

"Just looked up to see if you've got any more work ready," she explained.

He sprang to his feet and stood there, for a moment, unsteadily.

"Come in and shut the door," he ordered. "Look! Look!" he added, pointing to his table. "Thirty-three sheets! I've been working all the time. I've been living, I tell you, living. God knows where!—not in this accursed little world. Here, let's pick up the sheets. There's enough work for you."

She looked at him curiously.

"Have you been in that chair ever since?" she asked.

"Ever since," he assented enthusiastically.

"Any lunch?"

"Not a scrap. Never thought about it."

"You'll make yourself sick, that's what you'll do," she declared. "Go out and get something at once."

"Never even thought about lunch," he repeated, half to himself. "Where have you been?"

"Some luck," she replied. "First place I dropped in at. Found there was a girl gone home for the day, fainted. Lots of work to do, so they just stuck me down in her chair. Three dollars they gave me. The girl's coming back tomorrow, though, worse luck."

"When did you have your lunch?"

"Haven't had any., I'm going to make myself a cup of tea now."

He reached for his hat.

"Not on your life!" he exclaimed. "Some sling, Miss Martha Grimes. I have written three-quarters half way to the type them! I tell you it's [illegible] I have had at the back of my head for months. It's there now on the tip of my tongue, flaring words. Come along."

"Where to?"

"We are going to eat," he insisted. "I am faint, and so are you. We are going to that same place, and we'll have lunch and dinner in one."

"Nothing doing," she snapped. "You'll see some more people who recognize you."

He waved his hand contemptuously.

Who Cares?

"Who cares! If you don't come along with me, I'll go up town to the Waldorf or the Ritz Carlton. I'll waste my money and advertise myself. Come along—that same little quiet corner. I don't suppose your friends will be there again."

"Stella won't," she admitted doubtfully. "She's going to Brighton. I'd just as soon be out," she went on ruminatingly. "Shouldn't be surprised if she didn't bring that guy in, after all."

He had already rung the bell to the lift.

"Look at me!" she exclaimed ironically. "Nice sort of an object I am to take out! Got a raincoat on—though it's dry enough—because my coat's gone at the seams."

"If you don't stop talking like that," he declared, "I'll march into one of those great stores and order everything a woman wants to wear. Look at me. Did you ever see such clothes!"

"A man's different," she protested. "Besides, you've got a way with you of looking as though you could wear better clothes if you wanted to—something superior. I don't like it. I should like you better if you were common."

"You're going to like me better," he assured her, "because we are going to have a cocktail together within the next three minutes. Look at you—pale as you can stick. I bet you haven't had a mouthful of food all day. Neither have I, except a slice of bread and butter with my tea this morning. We're a nice sort of couple to talk about clothes. What we want is food."

She swayed for a moment and pretended that she tripped. He caught her arm and steadied her. She jerked it from him.

"Have your own way," she yielded.

They reached the corner of the street, plunged into the surging crowds of Broadway, passed into the huge restaurant, where once more pounced upon by a businesslike, but garrulous maitre d'hotel and escorted to a remote table in a sort of annex of the room. Philip pushed the menu away.

Cocktails in a Hurry

"Two cocktails—the quickest you ever mixed in your life," he ordered. "Quicker than that, mind."

The man was back again almost at once with two frosted glasses upon a tray. They laughed together almost like children as they set them down smartly.

"I know what I want, and you, too, by the look of you," he continued—"a beefsteak, with some more of that green corn you gave me the other day, and fried potatoes and Burgundy. We'll have some oysters first while we wait."

She sighed.

"I don't mean to come here with you again," she said, a little impatiently. "I don't know why I give in to you. You're not strong, you know. You are a weak man. Women will always look after you; they'll always help you in trouble—I suppose they'll always care for you. Can't think why I do what you want me to. Guess I was near starving."

He laughed.

"You don't know much about me yet," he reminded her.

"You don't know much about yourself," she retorted glibly. "Why, according to your own confession, you only married life a few weeks ago. I fancy what went before didn't count for much. You've been fretted and tied up somewhere. You haven't had the chance of getting big like so many of our American men. What are you going to do with this play of yours?"

Miss Elizabeth Dalstan has promised to produce it," he told her.

She looked at him in some surprise.

"Elizabeth Dalstan?" she repeated. "Why, she's one of our best actresses."

"I understood so," he replied. "She had heard the story—fact I wrote out one of the scenes with her. She is going to produce it as soon as it's finished."

"Well, all you poor idiots who write things have some one else to tell them 'perverbial,'" she remarked. "You seem as though you mean it, though. Where did you meet Elizabeth Dalstan?"

"I came over with her on the Etheltania," he answered thoughtlessly.

She gave a little start. Then she turned upon him almost in anger.

"Well, of all the simpletons!" she exclaimed. "So that's the way you give yourself away, is it? Just here from Jamaica, eh? Nothing to go with Douglas Romilly? Never heard of the Etheltania, did you? I'd like to see you on the grid at police headquarters for five minutes, with one of our men asking all sorts of friendly questions! You'd look well, you would! You ought to go about with a nurse!"

Philip had all the appearance of a guilty child.

"You see," he explained penitently, "I am new to this sort of thing. However, you know now."

"Still ready to swear that you're not Douglas Romilly, I suppose?"

"On my honor I am not," he replied.

"Kind of funny that you should have been on the steamer, after all," she jeered.

"Perhaps so, but I am not Douglas Romilly," he persisted.

She was silent for a moment, then she shrugged her shoulders.

"What do I care who you are?" she said. "Here, help me off with this raincoat, please. It's warm in here, thank goodness!"

He looked at her as she sat by his side in her plain black dress, and was impressed for the first time with a certain well-preserved grace of outline, which made him for the moment oblivious of the shabbiness of her gown.

"You have rather a nice figure," he told her with a sudden impulse of ingenuousness.

She turned upon him almost furiously. Something in his expression, however, seemed to disarm her. She closed her lips again.

"You are nothing but a child!" she declared. "You don't mean anything. I'd be a fool to be angry with you."

The waiter brought their steak. Philip was conscious of something in his companion's eyes which almost horrified him. It was just that gleam of hunger—desire which has starvation for its back ground.

"Don't let's talk," he pleaded. "There isn't any conversation in the world as good as this."

Horrified Him

The waiter served them and withdrew, casting a curious glance behind. They were, from his point of view, a strange couple, for, cosmopolitan though the restaurant was, money was plentiful in the neighborhood, and clients as shabby as these two seldom presented themselves. He pointed them out to a maitre d'hotel, who in turn whispered a few words concerning them to a dark, lantern-jawed man, with keen eyes and a hard mouth, who was dining by himself. The latter glanced at them and nodded.

"Thank you, Charles," he said. "I've had my eye on them. She's a pauper, daughter of that old fool Grimes, in a side street. His typewriting—precious little, I should think, from the look of her. The man's interesting. Don't talk about them. Understand?"

The maitre d'hotel bowed.

"I understand, Inspector. Not much any one can tell you, sir."

"Pays his bill in American money, I suppose?" the diner asked.

"Yes, sir—in gold. Mr. Dane," Charles replied. "I believe he is an Englishman."

"Name of Merton Ware," the inspector agreed, nodding. "Just arrived from Jamaica. Writes some sort of stuff which the girl with him typewrites. That's his story. He's probably as harmless as a baby."

Charles bowed and moved away. His smile was inscrutable.

Household Suggestions

To stone raisins, first free them from the stems, and then put them in a bowl. Cover them with boiling water and let them stand for two minutes. Pour off the water, open the raisins, and the seeds can be removed quickly and easily without the usual stickiness.

A sponge-cake batter should be thin enough to pour easily — not much heavier than double cream; a pound-cake batter must be as stiff so it can be stirred. Ordinary Madeira cake batter is between the two.

Before using oilcloth for the kitchen table mats at each corner of the wrong side a square of cotton. This prevents the corners from wearing out as soon as they otherwise would.

To clean chimneys or globes for lamps, gas, or electric lights, hold them for a moment in the steam from a boiling kettle, rub dry with a clean cloth, and polish with soft newspaper.

When making underclothes by machine it sometimes happens that they get oil-stained. The stains should be taken out with ammonia before the garments are sent to the laundry.

Before wearing new shoes or boots place them in a warm—not hot—place for a few minutes. This will expand the leather slightly and make it more pliable.

To keep flowers fresh, place a pinch of bicarbonate of soda in the water before putting them into a vase.

A Child's Soft Teeth Are Easily Injured

The teeth of young children are not yet thoroughly calcified; many have naturally soft, chalky teeth. Many tooth pastes contain pumice, powdered oyster-shell, acid-calcium-phosphate. Prof. Gies of Columbia College found one of these which was gritty enough to scratch glass. It is well for mothers to be careful.

A great many professional men allow only Absolon Dental Cream to be used in their homes. Dr. Henry H. Kridler, professor of chemistry at Toledo University, considers it a perfect preparation, and the children of the Rochester Orphan Asylum have their "tooth drills" with it.

Absolon is calcium carbonate, saponified and mixed with the well-known antiseptic oils of cloves, cinnamon and eucalyptus. It is peculiarly effective and safe for women and children. The lasting five weeks can be bought, guaranteed, at any drug store.—Advertisement.

Splendid Treatment for Wrinkled, Flabby Skin

She who coddles herself all day in an overheated house and finds her skin flushed and flabby as a consequence, can quickly freshen up for the evening by just bathing her face in a lotion made by dissolving an ounce of pure powdered saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel. She will find this most refreshing. It promptly rids the wrinkles and draws in the sags; tissue almost immediately, and the face appears wonderfully rejuvenated.

The ingredients, of course, are perfectly harmless and no trace of the treatment remains on the skin. Be sure to ask the druggist for the powdered saxolite.—Advertisement.

The Valley of the Giants

By Peter B. Kyne

"I AM not—since you tell me Colonel Pennington controls that bank—should accommodate us in the most natural procedure imaginable. Pennington is only playing safe—which is why the bank declined to give me the money in a lump sum. If we run a night-shift, Pennington knows that we can't dispose of our excess output under present market conditions. The redwood trade is in the doldrums and will remain in them to a greater or less degree until the principal redwood centres secure a rail outlet to the markets of the country. It's a safe bet our lumber is going to pile up on the mill dock; hence, when the smash comes and the Sequoia Bank of Commerce calls our loan and we cannot possibly meet it, the lumber on hand will prove security for the loan, will it not? In fact, it will be worth two or three dollars per thousand more than than it is now, because it will be air-dried. And inasmuch as all the signs point to Pennington's gobbling us anyhow,it strikes me as a rather good business on his part to give us sufficient rope to insure a thorough job of hanging."

"But what idea have you got back of such a procedure, Bryce?"

"Merely a forlorn hope, Dad. Something might turn up. The market may make a sudden spurt and go up three or four dollars."

"Yes—and it may take a sudden spurt and drop three or four dollars," his father reminded him.

Bryce laughed. "That would be Pennington's funeral, Dad. And whether the market goes up or comes down, it costs us nothing to make the experiment."

"Quite true," his father agreed.

"Then, if you'll come down to the office tomorrow morning, Dad, we'll hold a meeting of our board of directors and authorize me, as president of the company, to sign the note to the bank. We're borrowing this without collateral, you know."

John Cardigan sighed. Such daring financial acrobatics were not his usual with him, but as Bryce had remarked there was no reason why, in their present predicament, they should not gamble. Hence he entered no further objection, and the following day the agreement was entered into with the bank. Bryce closed by wire for the extra logging equipment and immediately set about rounding up a crew for the woods and for the night shift in the mill.

For a month Bryce was as busy as the proverbial one-armed paperhanger with the itch, and during that time he did not see Shirley Sumner or hear of her, directly or indirectly. Only at infrequent intervals did he permit himself to think of her, for he was striving to forget, and the memory of his brief glimpse of paradise was always provocative of pain.

Begins Duties

Moira McTavish, in the meantime, had come down from the woods and entered upon her duties in the mill office. The change from her dull, drab life, giving her, as it did, an opportunity for companionship with other people of greater mentality and refinement than she had been used to, quickly brought about a swift transition in the girl's nature. With the passing of the coarse shoes and calico dresses and the substitution of the kind of clothing all women of Moira's instinctive refinement and natural beauty long for, the girl became cheerful, animated and imbued with the optimism of her years. At first old Sinclair resented the advent of a woman in the office; then he discovered that Moira's efforts lightened his own labors in exact proportion to the knowledge of the business which she assimilated from day to day.

Moira worked in the general office, and except upon occasions when Bryce desired to look at the books or Moira brought some document into the private office for his perusal, there were days during which his pleasant "Good morning, Moira," constituted the extent of their conversation. To John Cardigan, however, Moira was a ministering angel. Gradually she relieved Bryce of the care of the old man.

She made a coalition for his easy-

IF MOTHERS ONLY KNEW

Thousands of Children Suffer from Worms and Their Mothers Do Not Know What the Trouble Is.

Signs of worms are: Constipation, sour stomach, deranged stomach, swollen upper lip, offensive breath, hard and full belly with occasional gripings and pains about the navel, pale face of leaden tint, eyes heavy and dull, twitching eyelids, itching of the nose, itching of the rectum, short dry cough, grinding of the teeth, little red points sticking out on the tongue, starting during sleep, slow fever.

Mrs. H. N. Roberts, 645 Asylum street, Flint, Mich., used Dr. True's Elixir for her little baby girl when she was sick. Mrs. Roberts wrote to Dr. J. F. True & Co.: "My little girl is relieved of her worms." And in a later letter wrote: "Baby is fine and I think it was your medicine (Dr. True's Elixir, Your Family Laxative and Worm Expeller) that helped her." If your child is ill start giving Dr. True's Elixir at once. Buy Dr. True's Elixir at your dealers at once. Three sizes.

chair in the office; she read the papers to him, and the correspondence, and discussed with him the receipt and delivery of orders, the movements of the lumber fleet, the comedies and tragedies of his people, which had become to him matters of the utmost importance. She brushed his hair, dusted his hat, and crowned him with it when he left the office at nightfall, and whenever Bryce was absent in the woods or in San Francisco, it fell to her lot to lead the old man to and from the house on the hill. To his starved heart her sweet womanly attentions were tremendously welcome, and gradually he formed the habit of speaking of her, half tenderly, half joking, as "my girl."

Bryce had been absent in San Francisco for ten days. He had planned to stay three weeks, but finding his business consummated in less time, he returned to Sequoia unexpectedly. Moira was standing at the tall bookkeeping desk, her beautiful dark hair bent over the ledger, when he entered the office and set his suitcase in the corner.

Heard Whistling

"Is that you, Mr. Bryce?" she queried.

The identical individual. Moira. How did you guess it was I?"

She looked up at him then, and her wonderful dark eyes lighted with a flame Bryce had not seen in them heretofore. "I knew you were coming," she replied simply.

"But how could you know? I didn't telegraph because I wanted to surprise my father, and the instant the boat touched the dock I went ayeraide and came directly here. I didn't even wait for the crew to run out the gangplank—so I know nobody could have told you I was due."

The Two Voices

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

He looked at her affectionately. "Yes, Ruth," he said, softly, "I was just like that. That is one reason why the boy is so dear to me—because he looks like his mother—and she loved him deeply."

His voice broke. He threw his head back impatiently.

"I must not be a weak fool! Child, help me keep my boy's happiness safe."

Ruth held out her hands to him. "I promised him I would when he went away," she said, quickly. "Those were the very words I used. I said, "I will keep your happiness safe for you."

"But how—unless Doris helps?" the father argued.

"I will find a way," Ruth said, confidently, although she had no idea what the "way" would be.

A Loyal Sister

"Thank you," Ruth nodded her gratitude at the compliment. "But Doris is older than I—and much, much more lovable.

"No, please do not contradict me," as he started to speak. "I know my sister far better than you do. And I know just how good and fine she is."

She uttered this opinion with more decision, because her conscience warned her that she might have seemed disloyal to Doris. The father's fears had been so much like her own misgivings that she had let herself show a doubt which was not very kind to the absent girl.

"I must go downtown for an hour or so," Mr. Rodney said, suddenly, going into the hall for his hat and overcoat, then returning to the drawing-room. "If Hugh seems any worse after his talk with Doris, I can come home. But I have been away from the office for so long that I must give some matters there my personal attention today if possible. And Dr. Denton is not to bring the invalid until the afternoon. I will be back by then."

"You will let us know the result of the consultation?" Ruth asked timidly

"Of course I will."

"Doris will be very anxious," she said by way of explanation.

"Naturally she will," he agreed. "I will not wait any longer now, for Hugh will keep her with him for a good while, no doubt—and the maids are to listen for his bell when she has gone."

In the meantime, make yourself at home, Ruth. Sit down and read, or do as you please."

She thanked him and closed the front door behind him.

He had said that Doris would be upstairs a good while. If she lingered with Hugh it would be an excellent sign. If not—

There was a rustle in the hall above. Then the library door opened and closed. There was a subdued sound of voices.

With a vague feeling of uneasiness Ruth went back into the drawing room. Doris must have lingered outside the door of the library trying to summon courage to enter—listening, perhaps, for any sound from the waiting invalid.

But at last she had gone in to her lover. By now she was probably folded in his arms.

CHAPTER XVII.

RELUCTANTLY and slowly Doris Courtney had climbed the stairs to the second floor of the Rodney house.

Outside the room in which her lover waited for her she stopped, loath to enter. She was glad the door was shut. She was sure that the occupant had not heard her light foot-fall.

Standing motionless, she listened to the low murmur of voices in the drawing-room below. She wondered what her sister and David Rodney were saying—if they were discussing her. But she could not ascertain without going half-way down the stairs. Moreover, she was not addicted to eaves-dropping. It was a dangerous practice, and Doris Courtney was of a timid nature.

That was why she hesitated to meet her lover. She was actually afraid to see him in his changed state.

The front door closed. The master of the house had gone out. In the library the invalid, laying on the couch, heard the sound. He may have thought it was the door closing behind his betrothed, for, with a quavering voice he spoke her name.

"Doris!" he called.

Muttering all her will-power, the girl obeyed the summons. As she entered the library, Hugh Rodney struggled to a sitting posture.

"Doris!" he said again, eagerly, tremulously.

For an instant a compassion that was almost maternal seized the girl. She crossed the room swiftly.

"Yes, Hugh—yes, I am here!" she answered, bending to kiss his forehead, then stroking his hair. "Oh, my poor dear! my poor dear!"

Even now she averted her gaze. She shrank from seeing him as he really was.

"Lie down again, Hugh," she commanded.

Elderly People Have A Daily Health Problem

Stomach muscles and digestive organs slow to act as age advances

MOST people find the years slipping by without realizing it, until suddenly confronted with the fact that they can no longer digest everything they would like to eat. It then becomes their daily task to avoid what they know to be chronic constipation.

When exercise and light diet fail it will be necessary to resort to artificial means. Strong physics and cathartics, however, are not advisable for elderly people. They act too powerfully and a feeling of weakness results.

What is needed is a laxative containing effective but mild properties. This is best found in Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin which is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin. It acts gently and without griping, and used a few days will train the digestive organs to do their work naturally again without other aid.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has been on the market since 1892 and was the private formula of Dr. W. B. Caldwell, who is himself past 80 years of age and still active in his profession. It can be bought at any drug store and one bottle is enough to prove to even a large family many months. It is a trustworthy preparation.

In spite of the fact that Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the largest selling liquid laxative in the world, there being over 6 million bottles sold each year, many who need its benefits have not yet used it. If you have not, send your name and address for a free trial bottle to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 511 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois.

OIL AND STEEL ISSUES RULE WEAK

Middle States, Crucible, Keystone and General Motors Lead Decline

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor

Stocks were irregular in New York at noon, but the majority were showing losses and the tone was weak. Largest losses during the morning were shown by Middle States, Crucible, Keystone Tire and General Motors. At their lowest they were off from two to more than three points. Leathers showed some strength, particularly Hide and Leather preferred. At its highest it was up more than four. Oils, steels and motors ruled weak. The market was quiet, first hour transactions not totaling more than 200,000 shares.

Call money opened at 8 per cent. In the foreign exchange market demand sterling was off ⅝ at $3.68¾; cables at the opening. French francs receded 4 centimes at 11.61 and lire 5 centimes at 11.75.

REACTION FOLLOWS ADVANCE.

The market was strong at the opening, a general upward movement affecting almost all active issues. But the advance was short lived, a reaction coming almost immediately. It was both prompt and severe. Prices ceased off until the list was irregular. Crucible and Middle States Oil were weakest issues and quite active also. Rails showed some strength, leaders in this department being Penn Marquette and Texas & Pacific. A number of other carriers made smaller gains. Coppers were firm, but inactive. Oils had an uncertain trend and with steels, which were irregular, were the most active groups. At the end of an hour prices were below the opening level. American Woolen common began with three points gain and was showing a loss in the second hour. General Motors and Keystone Tire lost substantial initial gains and more. The majority of issues moved within a narrow range up to 11 o'clock.

MONEY THE MAIN FACTOR.

Tight money is still the main factor in the stock market. The New York bank statement of Saturday was more favorable, but there is general belief that the Federal Reserve rediscount rate is to be raised soon. Money has not arrived in New York from the West to the amount that was expected ahead of the year financing was completed, and the situation in general is such as to cause fear that liquidation of stocks would will be forced. The calling of loans is understood to have been in greater extent than has been appreciated by the public. Banks are endeavoring to improve their position to some extent. While investors buying on a small scale at the opening served to improve the tone, there was no surrender buying for the long account of any magnitude. Professionals continued the covering which caused the advance on Saturday. When the demand of shorts was filled prices took a downward turn.

Canada's Wheat Supply

Although in the ten 1919 months ended with October, Canada exported 68,251,000 bushels of wheat, Dominion official state there is still on hand from 50,000,000 to 60,000,000 available for foreign shipment. The Canadian wheat crop last year totalled 196,561,000 bushels.

Cotton Market Opening

New York, Jan. 19.—The cotton market had a comparatively narrow and featureless opening with first prices steady and unchanged to 15 points higher, cables and trade reports received as a result of buying by the Continent, but Liverpool was a seller on the months' crop. The feature was a firmer tone speculative long holdings, while the market was a particularly active one. Prices opened unchanged to 15 points higher, with March 24.00, May 24.20, July 24.30, October 24.50.

Chicago Grain Market

Chicago, Jan. 19.—Corn opened 7c to 9c higher, then spread back to the highest point of the day, with prices 1c to 2c higher on the opening. Prices were: Corn: January, 1.28½; May, 1.30½; July, 1.31¾. Oats: May, 82¾ to 82½; July, 75¾. Lard: Jan., 24.00. Ribs—May, 20.00; July, 20.05.

MARKET HEAVY AND TRADING NARROW

Carson Hill Weakest Issue on Exchange; Curb Oils Are Firmer

Prices were mixed on the Boston Stock Exchange at the opening and with the movement narrow. Only a few of the majority of active issues showed gains but it was not long before this condition was reversed. The market was irregular all the morning, but the tone became heavier. Carson Hill was a feature, being the most active issue. It was also the weakest. Before noon it had declined more than four points.

Other declines of a point or more were shown by Quincy, Davis, Old Dominion, Massachusetts Gas and International Portland Cement. Among those to record fractionally were Swift & Co., Libby, Waldorf, Eastern Steamship and Waltham Watch. Gains of a point or more were made by Torrington, International Cement, Mills and Mohawk. Smaller advances were achieved by Copper Range, United Shoe and Pacific Mills. Trading was still thin at the noon intermission. Very little was done in coppers; Gray & Davis was the only auto accessory stock to show life and there was no activity for any class.

CURB HAD WEAK TONE.

The tone of the Curb market was weak at the opening, but trading was of good volume at the start. Oils were quiet and showed a little more strength than was displayed by this group last week. Stocks to weaken early were Gulfport, Pioneer, Silver Reef, Ranier and Milway Moss. Among issues to advance at the opening were Arizona Extension, Arizona Silver, Imperial, Seven Metals, United Verde, Simms Petroleum, White Oil and Gilliland.

At the end of an hour Arizona Extension was off 4 cents at 21 cents, Imperial 5 cents at 25 cents, Silver Reef 1 cent at 9 cents and Seven Metals 3 cents at 23 cents. Simms Petroleum had receded ⅛ to 6⅝. Among gains were Arizona Silver ⅛ at 2⅜ and United Verde Extension ⅛ at 41.

LARGE COPPER SALES SO FAR THIS MONTH

Demand for copper continued strong during the first half of January, domestic delivery sales for the first ten days by one large New York agency manufacturing 24,000,000 pounds. Other agents have also booked many orders. In a little less than two weeks this month the Copper Export Association sold 24,640,000 pounds for delivery in Europe. Prices are remaining steady in the face of increased demand. It is understood that producers intend to dispose of practically all surplus metal before asking more for copper. Among gains were Arizona Silver ⅛ at 2⅜ and United Verde Extension ⅛ at 41.

At the end of an hour Arizona Extension was off 4 cents at 21 cents, Imperial 5 cents at 25 cents, Silver Reef 1 cent at 9 cents and Seven Metals 3 cents at 23 cents. Simms Petroleum had receded ⅛ to 6⅝. Among gains were Arizona Silver ⅛ at 2⅜ and United Verde Extension ⅛ at 41.

BRITAIN'S FOREIGN TRADE GROWING FAST

Although there are both Englishmen and Americans talking about the necessity of this country financing Europe's trade, England seems to be getting along on her own resources and the money already borrowed from the generous United States. Last year the net balance against England on account of trade, transportation and finance approximated $700,000,000. At the end of 1920, according to estimates by experts, England will have a balance favoring her to the extent of $1,000,000,000.

British exports began to climb in 1919. Over the first three months they averaged £40,000,000 a month. In November they amounted to £57,000,000, and in December to almost £91,000,000.

The memorial building is one-story and an auditorium capable of seating 250 persons. In the entrance hall of the building paintings of Mr. Cushing, brother of Gordon D. Cushing of Boston, will be hung. These are to be the gift of Mrs. Cushing. The architecture will be dedicated early next Summer.

CHARGE RATES ARE NOT FAIR TO NORTH ATLANTIC

The Chamber of Commerce has been asked by the New York State Chamber to join in a protest against unjust discrimination against North Atlantic ports as demonstrated in freight rates recently established by the government authorities. The New York State Chamber maintains that the North Atlantic States will be injured by the new tariff. The United States Railroad Administration recently adopted the new schedules including rates through South Atlantic and Gulf ports from Ohio, Illinois and States north thereof. These rates allow shipments from central freight territory through Southern ports at the same rates as through New York ports.

Lebanon, Ct., Jan. 19.—Fifty thousand dollars is left to two schools and two churches in this town by the will of George W. Lyman. The high school is given $20,000, and the town gets $15,000 toward the erection of a building. The Congregational Church and the Baptist Church get $5,000 each.

Steel Output Increasing

The output of steel mills is increasing although coal and labor shortage still exists. Pittsburgh reports that present production is about 80 per cent. of capacity. Steel mills are now producing about 576,000 gross tons a week. Their capacity is 720,000 tons.

SILVER CUP FOR BEST ESSAY ON ENLISTMENT

Trip to Washington and a Medal Also Offered by Major Shaw

In addition to a trip to Washington and return and a medal given by the War Department to the school child who prepares the best essay on "What Are the Benefits of an Enlistment in the U. S. Army," as was announced today, Major Shaw, Chief of the Army Recruiting Station, No. 3 Tremont Row, will present a silver cup to the boy or girl attending school in his district who hands in the best essay on said subject.

The recruiting office in Scollay square expects that thousands of essays will be prepared in competition for this prize and in order to expedite the judging of this immense amount of manuscript the recruiting officer has arranged that each school will select what it considers the best essay, and these essays, submitted by the various schools, will be judged by a board of three prominent educators appointed by Major Shaw to see which will have the honor of representing this section of Massachusetts in the final contest at Washington.

There are fifty-six recruiting districts in the United States and as this same plan will be followed by each recruiting officer who has control of a district, there will be, eventually, fifty-six essays, each representing the best one in its recruiting district, forwarded to Washington where three of the essays will be selected as first, second and third prize winners. The board that passes final judgment will consist of Secretary of War Baker, General Peyton C. March and General John J. Pershing.

The rules governing the contest were received today at the recruiting office in Scollay square and are as follows:

Subject: "What are the benefits of an enlistment in the United States Army."

The essay not to exceed 400 words, to be written on one side of sheet only.

The essay to be prepared in the class room where the pupil attends school during the regular day.

Each pupil to write essay by himself or herself.

Judgment of essays to be completed on April 19, 1920, anniversary of the Battle of Lexington.

The trip to Washington for the winning pupils, accompanied by parents or guardians, to take place on May 5th, 1920.

The War Department, in addition to the prizes mentioned above, will also present a silver cup to the three school pupils producing the prize-winning essays.

NEWTON MAYOR URGES SUPPORT FOR MINISTERS

Mayor Edwin O. Childs of Newton, speaking in behalf of the "Go to Church" drive in St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Newton Highlands, said he agreed with Secretary of State Lansing and Herbert Hoover, that there existed great need of spiritual regeneration.

People could worship on the golf links, in the theatre, or in an automobile on Sunday, if they would. But they do not, the mayor stated, hence the church is a necessary institution and teachers and preachers are important persons to uphold. The mayor advised strong financial as well as spiritual aid for the ministers.

The Cause and True Meaning of the "Dry Revolution"

The New York World says that since 12 o'clock Friday night the Constitution of the United States is dead; we are living under a revolutionary government of "more despotic powers" than "any civilized community unless we regard Bolshevist Russia as civilized"; henceforth Federal authority will "regulate the personal habits, customs and recreations of individual citizens"; and "there comes a new doctrine of property which is recognized nowhere else except in the Russia of Lenine and Trotsky"—the doctrine of confiscation.

The World is hysterical over prohibition. But it is greatly mistaken. The World sees no difference between a revolution whose object is to uplift and a revolution whose object is to destroy. What has just happened "by due process of law" represents nothing new or unprecedented in the legal sense. It represents only the orderly moral forces of the American people, operating in a strictly constitutional manner, to achieve a result approved by the majority of the people.

Before the constitutional amendment was adopted by forty-five States—all but three—prohibition prevailed in more than four-fifths of the States, and in more than nine-tenths of the territory of the United States.

The moral forces of the nation were awakened to the danger of the drink evil by the accumulated experience of four generations.

They gained great impetus from the full-page editorials published in the Hearst Sunday newspapers in 1904. This long series of full-page editorials, published from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and read by at least ten million Americans every Sunday, helped to awaken moral forces that, when organized, became irresistible.

The great brewers of beer and the grape growers, whose vineyards were less obnoxious than the vice-breeding and death-dealing distillers of strong drinks, made the irreparable mistake of uniting with the saloon, just as the Southern planters of an earlier generation erred by allying themselves with the slave traders.

Lincoln proposed that the government should pay for the slaves gradually and that all babes born in slavery should thereafter be free. But the slaveholders refused all compromises.

The brewers and the grape growers had repeated warnings of their fatal partnership, but ignored these warnings. So all went down together.

In three notable instances in our history the people have by orderly methods "exercised their constitutional right of amending or their revolutionary right to dismember or overthrow" the government by vote of the majority at the ballot box.

When this was done in respect to slavery, the private property of about two hundred thousand people who OWNED more than two million human beings, worth on an average a thousand dollars apiece as slaves, was confiscated without compensation by the government, but "under due process of law."

When a generation later Congress abolished the national gambling institution known as the Louisiana Lottery, it destroyed, without compensation, a well established business with agencies in almost every State of the Union, worth many millions of dollars.

The prohibition amendment has destroyed, it is estimated, more than three and one-half billion dollars in property.

These three confiscatory acts, two by constitutional amendment, one by Federal statute, having been approved by the moral sentiment of a great majority of Americans, are not, as the World says, a nullification of the Constitution.

They vindicate the Constitution and show that whatever the people, upon mature reflection, desire to do, whatever changes in our form of government are necessary to improve conditions of life in the United States, can be achieved under the Constitution, whenever a majority of people decide to act.

Aerial Mail Service Better Than Earning Its Way

Mail has been carried by airplane from New York to Washington, 218 miles for almost twenty months; from Chicago to Cleveland, 325 miles, for nearly eight months, and from Cleveland to New York, 430 miles, for six months.

Aerial letter carriers have carried 22,254,000 letters a total of 473,210 miles with an efficiency record of 91.49 per cent.

The average speed has been twice that of the fastest mail train and the income has been so satisfactory, in connection with the saving of time, that these routes are now self-supporting and the extra postage charge has been discontinued.

On the route between Cleveland and Chicago a world's record has been established of 205 consecutive 325-mile non-stop trips without a forced landing of any kind.

The operating cost to date, including overhead and interest on investment, is given by the Postmaster-General as $397,220.47. The revenue and savings are now at the rate of $693,000 a year.

We do not attach great importance to the fact that a particular branch of the postal service is run at a profit. There is always profit in good postal service, whether it shows in the budget or elsewhere.

But the fact that this new venture has so quickly proved better than self-sustaining adds political strength to the Postmaster-General's appeal to the Congress for funds and authority to extend the aerial mail service from coast to coast and from the Great Lakes to the Gulf.

Here is a timely chance to speed the commercial development of aviation without hazard to private capital or to the public treasury. The Congress would act wisely to grasp it.

BESIDES POISE, YOU NEED AVOIRDUPOIS

You pride yourself on being "refined and sensitive," but if your culture is such that the least adverse criticism upsets your delicate poise, you had better come down to earth.

So long as you live on this big globe you will find that nothing ever occurs just as expected, and if it did this world would be pretty tame.

You are human, if you are fastidious, and so are your companions in life.

Why not try to be a normal being and not an expulsive "freak"?

This world is too full of realities for anyone to have a monopoly on the quality of matchless beauty without a blemish.

So keep good courage with your finances.

Be on the alert for whatever might otherwise disturb your equilibrium, and, forearmed, you will have a greater sense of security and you won't be as likely to get your feelings hurt.

It is that little question of balance—the greatest thing in the world.

More Truth Than Poetry

A DARK AND STORMY NIGHT

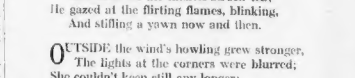
By S. E. KISER

THE Leap Year was young when they lingered
Where the glow of the embers grew dim;
She dropped the small book she had fingered,
And her look was directed at him.
On the davenport, sitting together,
While the flames dwindled low in the grate,
They had talked about art and the weather
And fashion and fortune and fate.

HE must have been thirty or older.
And she—but that wouldn't be fair—
He thought that it soon might be colder,
She made little dabs at her hair,
Then poked at the embers, reviving
The flame that had flickered and died;
The snow in mad flurries was driving
Through darkening spaces outside.

THE Leap Year was young, and, returning,
She seated herself in her place;
The light from the log that was burning
May have heightened the glow on her face;
She sighed and appeared to be thinking,
The clock on the mantel struck ten;
He gazed at the flirting flames, blinking,
And stifling a yawn now and then.

OUTSIDE the wind's howling grew stronger,
The lights at the corners were blurred;
She couldn't keep still any longer:
"Do you know this is Leap Year?" she purred.
In a second her arms were around him,
On his cheek he could feel her warm breath;
But early next morning they found him
Where he'd fallen and frozen to death.



DOCKED AT BOTH ENDS

A lot of people appear to be busy trying to leave nothing but the moc(k) in democracy.

WHY OUR SLEEP IS DISTURBED

In a few weeks we shall know whether Cleveland or Detroit has the larger population, and, gosh, how we are worrying about it!

LENDING AND SPENDING

"Lending Other People's Money" will make a good title for the principal chapter in the history of the present administration.

MR. JAMES Burton Pond
LECTURE MANAGER.
MY DEAR Mr. Pond.
FOR TWO or three weeks.
I'VE BEEN reading in the papers.
ABOUT ALL your troubles.
WITH MAURICE Maeterlinck.
AND OF how you want him.
TO TALK in English.
AND OF how he tried.
AND THE language he spoke.
WAS ONE of his own.
THAT A woman taught him
IN TWO or three weeks.
AND BECAUSE the woman.
AND MAURICE himself.
ARE THE only persons.
WHO KNOW the language.
IT WOULDN'T work.
WHEN HE tried it out.
AT CARNEGIE Hall, in New York.
AND I understand.
THAT SOME friends of Maurice.
HAVE MADE him promise
THAT HE won't talk to you.
WITHOUT HIS lawyer.
AND ALTOGETHER.
IT'S A terrible mess.
AND YOU'RE all mixed up.
WITH A lot of dates.
FOR MAURICE to fill
IN THE English language.
AND MAURICE says.
HE'LL FILL them in French.
AND YOU won't let him.
AND HE'S had the Blue Bird Ball.
AND A lot of publicity.
THAT YOU can't cash in
AND EVERY one's sore.
AND I'M sorry for you.
AND I want to suggest.
IF YOU still have the dates.
AND MAURICE won't go.
AND YOU need the money.
AND THE whole thing hangs.
ON WHETHER or not.
THE LECTURER.
CAN DO it in English.
THAT YOU might look around.
RIGHT HERE at home.
AMONG THE fellows.
WHO HAVE written books.
AND HIRE one.
AND SEND out word.
THAT AFTER a long.
AND DILIGENT search.
YOU HAVE found a man.
WHO FILLS the bill.
AND WHO won't insist.
UPON TALKING in French.
AND WHO has no scruples.
ABOUT TALKING to you.
AND SEND him out.
AND IN that way.
YOU CAN keep the money.
THAT MAURICE might get.
RIGHT HERE at home.
AND MR. Pond.
IF IT should happen.
THAT YOU may be talking.
WITH MAURICE'S lawyer.
I WISH you'd ask him.
TO PLEASE tell Maurice.
THAT I don't blame him.

I THANK you.

THE MORGAN MEMORIAL AND ITS WORK

By Randolph Wellford Smith

OFTEN between the boarding house shark and City Hall interpreters the poor alien did not have enough left to exist on until the first means pay day came around. Federal, State or municipal government gave absolutely no thought as to the welfare of the new citizen.

The Syrian minister was about to pass us in the hallway. Mr. Moore stopped him and he acknowledged the introductions in very much better English than is employed by the average Boston man.

The Syrians feel they have a home, a court of appeal and a place where they may say their prayers to the Father of All the Nations at the Memorial. So do the Italians and the Portuguese and many other peoples from far lands.

Kindly Rules

There are drastic, cardinal but kindly rules for every department of the institution. There is no go-as-you-please, free-for-all-atmosphere—such an atmosphere as so frequently mars and mitigates against the usefulness of some of the woodpile institutions. If a man who applies to the Memorial has fifteen cents in his pocket he must pay it for his night's lodging. But if he has nothing he is bathed, fed and given work, and he is paid a fair wage to do that work in accordance with his strength. If he is ill or too sick to work he is sent to a hospital and made well so that he can work.

There are many cot beds as comfortable as those on which the little ones of the day nursery take their afternoon siesta. The system of "graduating" dormitories is as interesting as it is novel. The newcomer is first domiciled on the lower floor. As his demeanor improves he gradually rises in the world until he reaches the top floor, where there is positive luxury. There are pool tables, a library and nearly all the comforts of a fairly comfortable club.

The work among men is entirely different from what it was a little while since. No longer the fantastic procession of revolting drunkards. Enter now a tottering, often withered and weak derelict, victim of the saloon, who can no longer secure the poison that has wrecked all that is best within him. The redemption of those men is going to be slow and difficult, and it is a phase of the work that is new and which Dr. Helms and Mr. Moore are approaching with much temerity. What can be accomplished is an open question. Society has sold these derelicts whiskey so long that it might save itself an income tax that to the layman the task of redemption looks extremely difficult and far from promising.

To the Store

After the innumerable things are made over they are sent to the immense store on the street thing that flashed across my vision floor. And such a store! The first was a double row of silk hats, shiny, luminous and all ready for the afternoon reception, the nuptials or a stroll through the Public Garden. When the jeunesse doree of Beacon street or Commonwealth avenue has wearied of his bell crown or the straight tile of last season's vintage, into the Morgan bag it goes.

All my life I have marvelled how the $40 a week vaudeville artist (?) could smash a silk hat at every performance.

Once I was so curious that I asked the prices in an old clo' shop, and found, to my amazement, that they were but little less dear than in the shops where the real new things were sold. The Morgan Memorial solves the problem. The silk hats are cheap there. You can buy a regular Beau Brummel sort of a thing for a dollar or so, and Mr. Moore tells me he sells them to artists (?) who travel from coast to coast.

A close observer of charitable institutions gets to be more or less finicky. I remember visiting one of these institutions in a small New England city where the wood pile and a soup kitchen were highly in vogue. It was very cold and there were about a dozen men waiting for a plate of soup and wondering how later on perhaps they could finesse the wood pile.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

Ideas Are Dangerous
Beware of Fanaticism
What Next From Lenine?
No Cause to Worry

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1920.

There is force in the enthusiasm of a revolution.

Trotsky was an obscure worker on New York's East Side, but thinking.

Lenin was a Russian revolutionist, Slav and Mongol mixed. The Czar had executed his older brother for protesting against autocracy.

Lenin was hunted for years, but all the while he was hunting the Czar.

He got him. And now he has compelled the Allies, which means the British empire, to admit that it cannot beat him and might as well trade with him. Various excuses are given for the sudden change of front.

They say "when" Russia gets to work and makes money, Bolshevism, fat, rich, quarrelling about the spoils, will turn bourgeoisie and die out. Something in that, profit does change men.

Lloyd George knew the British workmen detested the combination of all Europe against the effort of Russians to govern themselves, and that influenced him.

But the main thing is that Lenin has beaten his enemies, enlarged his frontiers, and was startled on excursion to plant Bolshevism in England's dissatisfied Indian possession. That is the milk in the cocoanut.

As to this grand country, its treatment of the Russian question was worthy the high intelligence of some Basuto chief. First we said to Russian revolution, "Nice doggie, have a bone." We offered cash to the revolutionists and sent a delegation to tell Russia how delighted we were to see autocracy knocked down.

The head, of course, was Elihu Root, corporation lawyer, known in Russia for his efforts to help the Czar get revolutionists caught in this country. Mr. Root did not do much, did not even get back the cash that short-sighted American bankers had lent the Czar.

Then America said to Russia, "If nice doggie will not have a bone and shake hands with Mr. Root, then naughty doggie shall be shot."

Our soldiers were sent over, and without consent of Congress war was made on the Russian government with which the Allies are now dealing. But the Russian revolutionary doggie would not take the bone and gave as good as was sent and better, when the shooting began, so that phase of it is over.

The next phase will be enlightening. Russia is rich, Russia can supply the Allies with raw materials, and as Lloyd George says, make it unnecessary to buy everything from America.

Russian opportunity will add to the wealth of individuals and corporations in this country. Corporations that sell over there will see their stocks climb, great banks will forget about their few hundred millions of repudiated Russian bonds. When Russian trade begins to mean billions, then how soon will high finance begin to discover in Lenin statesmanship and Napoleonic power, in place of horrid barbarism.

But, the "but" is there. Suppose Lenin says: "All right, we'll trade, but we'll go right on with our little international world program. The excursion to India is still on, also other excursions to spread the truth that belongs only to us."

Could an idea, like a disease, spread over the world, creeping irresistibly? It could, and has done it. Christianity crept from the mind of the Roman slave and the darkness of the Catacombs to the splendor of the imperial throne.

In the mind of Gautama, idling away life with his women, was born the idea that such life was wrong, that self-sacrifice was better. And that idea, called Buddhism, has spread over the world and for centuries controlled a number of men greater than those calling themselves Christians.

No real force exists except of an idea, a thing, by the way, which cannot be frightened, cannot be deported, locked up or hanged, a power that can be conquered only by another idea of greater force based on clearer truth.

With an ocean on either side of us, one hundred millions here, wealth unlimited and science highly developed, there nothing in Bolshevism, internal or external, to worry the United States.

Presumably now this government will mind its own business for a while as regards Russia, acting toward that country as we wanted other nations to act toward us in our revolution.

If, in addition, we can develop in national service honesty and efficiency in place of the shameful graft and profiteering that would have disgraced the country in this war, we need not worry about the rampaging Russian elephant. Let those worry that are near by, and that think, as does Lenin, that world empire can be got and kept. It cannot, for ideas, more powerful than armies and fleets, interfere.
